A New Movie.
A New Idea.
Jack Dempsey's Hand.
Has She Seen Taglioni?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.

HERE IN THE HEART of movie land, a new picture is as important as the opening of Parliament by King George.

"Trader Horn" was shown for the first time at the Chinese Theater in Hollywood last night. Thousands that could not get in lined the streets on both sides, waiting to see the great movie stars "appear in person" to attend the opening.

FIERCELY BLAZING lights made it easy to photograph the super-beings as they arrived, looking very beautiful and unconscious of the fact that they were observed, while high school boys and girls rushed out begging for autographs.

Ten dollars is a moderate price for a seat at such a performance. You cannot imagine the crowd's eagerness unless you happened to see the waiting New York thousands when Consuelo Vanderbilt married the Duke of Marlborough in a Fifth avenue church.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER spent $1,300,000 making the picture in Africa, and you ought to see and hear the four lions fighting, the rhinoceroses shot down, the big ape slain by the leopard. Above all you must see the 16-year-old white girl who rules the savage cannibals with a lash in her hand, and her eyes wide open. She really is a wonder, blonde skin snow-white, not the slightest sign of tan, although she has lived under Africa's tropical sun since she was a baby, walking in her bare feet, wearing nothing but her own golden hair and a little girdle of monkey fur around the waist.

She falls in love with a young white gentleman after having lashed his face without making him wince. Then she suddenly becomes feminine and he has to carry her in his arms through miles and miles of jungle and wild animals. Women are never what you expect them to be.

MUCH OF THE MOST important news of many days comes from the scientific laboratory maintained by the General Electric Company, of which Owen D. Young and Gerard Swope are the responsible heads.

The new device, a thyratron, makes it possible to send power to distances hitherto unattainable, in fact all around the earth at the equator, although that will not be necessary or useful.

This new device, a glass bulb held in one hand representing the equivalent of 10,000 horsepower, takes the place of a huge rotary converter that would fill two freight cars.

THE NEW INVENTION is too complicated for the lay mind, even with the admirably clear explanation of C. W. Stone, General Electric engineer.

It may make available power supplies now going to waste, for instance, a giant cataract in Brazil, more powerful than Niagara. It may harness far-away African cataracts to run machinery in those new African copper mines. Something more for American copper men to think about.

EVEN MORE IMPORTANT, this might be the beginning of power transmission without wires, making it possible for airplanes to take up energy from the earth, as an electric engine takes it from a third rail, making fuel tanks unnecessary.

The nation is indebted to its great industrial corporations for their research work adding billions to the national wealth.

Man does these wonderful things with electricity, not knowing what electricity is, and that amazes him. He does not know the nature of the human mind that performs these miracles, which is even more amazing. If you wonder at the electron, consider the intellect that weighs the electron, as it does the distant star, and measures the speed of both.

IF YOU SAY "be careful of your health," little boys and grown men pay no attention. If you say "Jack Dempsey's left hand is badly infected, and he may lose his arm," everybody pays attention.

Dempsey neglected a small cut. The invisible germ is more powerful than the greatest fighter. The powerful hand is swollen twice its size and may be amputated.

Had Dempsey immediaaely flooded the cut with iodine he would have had no trouble. War veterans will tell you that soldiers were court martialed for failure to apply iodine even to the slightest wound.

Don't neglect slight injuries.

A boy at play in the Christmas holidays was pushed into a rose bush, his hand was pricked by a thorn and he died of lockjaw, the germs, doubtlessly contained in manure used to fertilize the roses.

PAVLOWA, GREAT RUSSIAN DANCER, is dead. They may possibly dance in heaven, since they have music, and David's dancing before the ark was approved above.

In that case, Pavlowa by this time may have met and watched Taglioni, greatest ballerina that ever lived on earth.

IN MODERN DANCING various things are imitated, Apaches, and heaven knows what.

Even Pavlowa had to imitate a swan. Taglioni imitated nothing, content to interpret the grace of womanhood. She died long ago. Those that saw her used to say that she "floated" across the stage.

If women dancers would dance, and not turn hand-

C. L. Saxton, 54, veteran real estate operator, and president of the C. L. Saxton Company, died following a sudden heart attack early today in his suite in the William Penn Hotel.

He had been in ill health for two years. His death was attributed partly to worry over the critical illness of his wife in the West Penn Hospital. She was not informed of his death. His brother, J. W. Saxton, was with him when death came.

Mr. Saxton

He was born November 10, 1877, at Frankford Springs, Washington County, a son of Samuel J. and Isabella Saxton. When he was two years old, the family moved to Edgeworth. He was educated in the schools of Edgeworth and Sewickley.

Mr. Saxton began his career in the real estate business 34 years ago with W. L. Scott & Co. He founded the firm which bears his name in 1910. He was a member of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange a few years ago and conducted an investment business with the late Oliver Pugh. On the latter's death, Mr. Saxton dissolved the brokerage firm and devoted his time to real estate and banking interests.

MEMBER OF CLUBS

Mr. Saxton was a member of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, Union Club, Fellowship Lodge of Masons, No. 1 Commandery and Syria Mosque.

Besides his widow, he leaves one daughter, Mrs. Kathleen Montague, of Philadelphia; a sister, Mrs. Lee Warthman, of Erie, and two brothers, J. W. and G. B. Saxton. He had made his home in the William Penn Hotel since it was built and also had a summer home at Valencia.

Pinchot Victory Held Not Anti-Dry Defeat

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Addressing the Pennsylvania division, Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform, John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate for governor last November, said yesterday that Governor Pinchot's victory was not a defeat for the "so-called anti-drys" but was occasioned by "political astuteness of which my opponent is a master."

NIGHT CLUB MAN CUT, GIRL HELD

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—A former night club owner was found unconscious with several stab wounds in his body early today in front of Club Abbey, an all-night resort in the theatrical district.

Mavis King, cigaret girl in Club Abbey, discovered Charles Sherman, 32, the victim, and took him to a hospital in a taxicab. Physicians said his condition was serious, and declared he may have been beaten and shot, as well as stabbed.

Miss King was held for questioning.

DRY WAR RAGES IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(INS.)—Lashed by charges that Washington "bootleggers bear a charmed life," the Senate was involved today in a dry and anti-dry war over enactment of the Howell bill, proposing bone-dry prohibition enforcement in the nation's capital.

The proposed law, with drastic provisions for making Washington a "model city," would make President Hoover responsible for prohibition enforcement here, according to the author, Senator Robert B. Howell (Rep.), of Nebraska. At any rate, the administration's floor leaders fought its consideration, although Howell protested the President favored its passage.

The Wickersham commission's prohibition report undoubtedly

WOMAN VICTIM OF SWINDLERS QUITS U. S. JOB

Chicago Revenue Collector Quizzed Hours on Faro Game; Convinces Sleuths

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—The resignation of Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge as federal collector of internal revenue here was en route to Washington today, it was announced at her office.

Accompanying the resignation is a confidential report of A. P. Madden, chief of the Intelligence Unit of the Revenue Bureau, concerning Mrs. Blacklidge's connection with the $50,000 faro game played in a Springfield hotel last week.

NEAR COLLAPSE

Mrs. Blacklidge was reported near collapse as a federal investigation directed from Washington centered about her office.

Investigators had questioned Mrs. Blacklidge four hours regarding the faro game in which three men fleeced her of $50,000 in cash belonging to Edward R. Litsinger, member of the board of review.

AGENTS CONVINCED

The agents said they were convinced by her story that she was duped by swindlers, who, having led her to believe she had won $207,000 at faro, induced her to borrow $50,000 in cash from Litsinger.

Litsinger, a member of the Deneen political faction, as is Mrs. Blacklidge, has appealed to authorities in both Sangamon and Cook counties to prosecute the swindlers. Litsinger, in his report to authorities, said he had loaned the money to the government official for use in a business transaction.

RESIGNATION RECEIVED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(INS.)—The resignation of Mrs. Myrtle T. Blacklidge, as collector of internal revenue for Northern Illinois, was received by the Bureau of Internal Revenue today.

The resignation, which Mrs. Blacklidge asked take effect immediately, was not formally accepted.

It was stated on behalf of U. S. Commissioner of Internal Revenue David Burnet that her resignation would be accepted after the department's investigation into the operation of her office is completed.

TOM MIX LOSES VERDICT FOR $90,000

Col. Miller Wins Erie Suit For Contract Damages; Score Even in Legal Tilts

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Tom Mix, movie cowboy, who wins against every obstacle in his two-fisted screen appearances, lost a verdict in Erie County Court today to Col. Zack Miller, owner of the 101 Ranch Shows, who sued him for $325,000 charging breach of contract. A jury awarded Miller $90,000 damages.

The verdict was the reverse of that returned earlier in the week at Natchez, Miss., where Col. Miller had entered suit for $50,000 on similar grounds. The Natchez jury decided Mix had not committed libel in denying he entered an agreement with Col. Miller to appear as a cowboy in the 101 Ranch shows.

Today's verdict, Mix said, was a surprise to him. Col. Miller was not present, having left yesterday at the close of the trial for his ranch in Oklahoma.

The jury, which went out at 1 p. m. yesterday and completed its work at 5 p. m., brought in a sealed verdict to Judge U. P. Rossiter this morning.

Suit was filed here in 1929 when both the 101 Ranch Shows and the Sells-Floto Circus appeared in Erie. Mix was an attraction with the Sells-Floto outfit, and Miller, in his suit, claimed he should have been with the 101 Ranch Shows because he had made a verbal agreement to join Col. Miller's troupers.

Rudy Makes New Friends But Keeps Old Vegetables

O'MALLEY'S LIEUTENANT ESCAPES BLAST

District Chairman and Family Hurled From Beds; Police, Firemen Rushed to Scene

A bomb hurled from a speeding automobile early today damaged the home of James R. (Coxey) Lancia, 33, Hill District politician, at 922 Bedford avenue, aroused scores of persons from their beds and shattered virtually every window in the 900 block Bedford avenue. Nobody was injured.

The explosion was heard as far as Oakland and the North Side. Glass covered the street as police and fire squads arrived. A check-up of property damage indicated the loss would be near $2,000, mostly to windows. There were no witnesses to the bombing, police say.

O'MALLEY FOLLOWER

Lancia, follower of Pat O'Malley, Strip political leader, is chairman of the First District of the Second Ward. With his wife and four children, he was asleep in the home when the blast occurred. Lancia was unable to explain the bombing. He told police he had received no threats and that he believed he was a victim of mistaken identity.

Lancia, his wife, Philomena, 30, and their son, Gilbert, aged 8 months, were asleep in the front room on the second floor. Three

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.—(INS.)—Daisy De Voe, former secretary of Clara Bow, who was found guilty on one count of stealing $825 from the motion picture actress, occupied a cell in the county jail today where she will be held until sentence is passed Monday.

The weary jury of seven men and five women, after nearly 49 hours of deliberation, found the blonde secretary not guilty on 34 other counts of the indictment. Miss De Voe was accused of embezzling $16,000 from the "It" girl of the screen.

Leniency was recommended by the jurors.

Ocean Yields Body Of Missing Inventor

LONG BEACH, Cal., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—The ocean has yielded the first clue to the strange disappearance of Charles Huddleston, 46-year-old inventor, and Mrs. Lola Cook, 36, a widow. The man's body, bearing evidence of a beating, was found under a pier at the waterfront. Police, who made an intense search since they dropped from sight January 13, said the man apparently had been murdered. No trace was found of the woman or the automobile in which they were seen.

BANK SUSPECT NOT IDENTIFIED

BULLETIN.

R. L. McGowan, arrested as a suspect in the Verona bank holdup, was not identified by witnesses of the robbery as the slayer of Cashier Charles N. McFarland.

County detectives took him to Verona, then said they would turn him back to North Side police. They said he did not fit the description of the bandit.

A suspect in the recent Verona bank holdup and slaying who, police say, has not left his apartment for more than a month, was turned over to county detectives after a hearing in North Side Police Court today. He was at once taken to Verona for possible identification.

The prisoner is R. L. McGowan, 37, of 510 East Diamond street. Police are questioning him in connection with the robbery of the Allegheny Trust Company at Verona in December 6, when Charles N. McFarland, cashier, was slain by a gunman, who escaped with about $1,000.

Officer Joseph D. Scanlon, who patrols the East Diamond street beat, has had the McGowan apartment under watch for several days. He was informed that McGowan had not left his apartment since the Verona holdup.

The squad arresting McGowan included Patrolman Scanlon, Capt. Anthony Block, Patrolman Sylvester Henry and Precinct Detective Florence Brunner.

562 Prisoners Rescued In Penitentiary Fire

The flames were discovered at midnight on the third floor of the main building, housing a garment factory, and had gained headway before the Wetumpka and Montgomery fire departments could get sufficient water pressure to fight the blaze.

When the alarm was sounded, all prisoners were aroused and directed into the yard, under guard, while the flames roared through the old building.

The women's cell blocks and the main building both burned. The south wing, in which youthful male prisoners were confined, was saved.

Deputy Warden Frank Boswell and all extra guards from Kilby prison at Montgomery, 20 miles away, came here to aid in keeping the prisoners under control, but except for a few hysterical shrieks from women prisoners, the convicts were orderly.

Pinchot Rule Starts Rush For Water Wagon

By E. W. PRENDERGAST,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 24.—Some of Capitol Hill's official and subofficial families discussed today the advisability of "going on the wagon" for four years, but decided that for the most part they would absolve from public drinking.

Applying naturally only to those who in the past have felt the urge to imbibe, Gov. Pinchot's demand for a pledge to support his policies and the constitution carried with it the implication that his followers, an intensely loyal lot, should be most considerate for his outstanding policies, many felt.

These, they pointed out, did not place prohibition as the big issue. Rather they felt that the public utility, road, unemployment and coal and iron police were paramount problems. One suggested:

"Drinking as a guest implies no violation of the law."

Many agreed that if a drink must be had, it should be in the privacy of a home.

Gov. Pinchot's pledge, announced yesterday, asks simply the upholding of the constitution and policies determined by the people in 1930.

Gov. Pinchot planned to spend the week-end in privacy, particularly to prepare for the Legislature, which reconvenes Monday night.

OUSTER ACTION AGAINST 3 ON POWER BOARD SEEMS SURE

SENATE VOTE 45-32 FOR RECALL

Resolution for Court Hearing Up Monday in Committee; Coalition Victory Expected

By PIERCE MILLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.

Ultimate ousting proceedings against three members of the Federal Power Commission by the Senate appeared assured today, despite the temporary setback suffered by the Democratic-Insurgent coalition when the Walsh resolution directing court action was referred to the judiciary committee.

The Senate, on a [illegible] recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Committee, Majority and Minority, [illegible] to bring quo warranto proceedings against Smith W. Brookhart, Democrat, Iowa; John W. Draper, Republican, New York, and Marcel Garsaud, Democrat, Louisiana, and has given them [illegible] to show cause why they should not be ousted from office.

MEETING MONDAY

The judiciary committee, of which Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, is chairman, will meet Monday and is expected to report the resolution out promptly.

Once in the Senate the Democratic-Insurgent coalition will have sufficient votes to push it, in the face of objections of Administration senators, it appears certain. Throughout the fight on the three commissioners since their discharge of Charles A. Russell, solicitor, and William V. Kelly, appointee, accomplished, the coalition has had a substantial margin in the Senate.

"REVOCATION UNTENABLE"

In committee there [illegible] Republicans—Norris, Borah, [illegible] Blaine of Wisconsin—and probably can be expected to vote with the seven Democrats in favor of the ousters. Ashurst of Arizona, Walsh of Montana, chief of the prosecution; Caraway of Arkansas, Stephens of Mississippi, Dill of Washington and Bratton of New Mexico—giving the coalition a majority of three votes.

Attorney General Mitchell's opinion, received scant notice from the coalition, although it is included in the Senate record.

Mitchell held it was "wholly untenable to assume the Senate had confirmed the nominations "subject to revocation."

The contention of the power commission opponents, many of them recognized as able lawyers, is that confirmation has never been completed, because the President has not been formally notified.

On the heels of estimates that water power investment "padding" will total $300,000,000, Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, demanded a sweeping investigation of power commission affairs. He announced he will introduce a resolution to ask for copies of all correspondence, if any, passing between President Hoover, Secretary of Interior Wilbur and members of the old commission. He declared Hoover's indorsement had been claimed for practices favorable to the power companies.

Wilbur was the old commission's active chairman.

Meet Federal Foes With Education, Coolidge Says

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 24.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Periodically we are asked to consider what to do about the organized efforts of those hostile to our form of government and system of society. We have about all the law necessary. Under the established inherent right of the people to determine their own institutions, overt acts of hostility are rightly punishable as crimes.

This is a free country. The people have a right to discuss openly changes in government to be made constitutionally. That does not include conspiracy to use force.

The only effective remedy that can ultimately succeed is education. Argument must answer argument. Our people reject the theory that the bread they earn should be eaten by others. They wish to determine who shall eat it. The number unwilling to be convinced that our institutions are sound, that freedom prevails, and that economic conditions are humanly fair, is strikingly small. Right thinking people should be alert, and somewhat organized to meet distortions of facts and illogical arguments. But our institutions are never in so much danger from those who are openly trying to destroy them as from the misguided actions of those who think they are saving society.

will furnish fireworks for the coming debate. Prohibition foes have announced they were waiting for action on the bill to vent their opinions of the commission's dry conclusion after an anti-dry report. They also threatened to talk the bill to death, since the Senate again demonstrated it is overwhelmingly dry.

A separate move meanwhile was under way to enact a liberal recommendation of the commission into law. Senator Royal S. Copeland, former New York health commissioner, declared he expected action on his bill carrying out the commission's recommendation for elimination of all restrictions over the prescription of physicians.

Meanwhile, it was learned today that President Hoover has declined to offer a new and clarifying statement of his view on the Wickersham report and prohibition until the storm within the Republican party ranks and Congress subsides.

He decided, it is [illegible] Senator Simeon Fess, Republican, Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee and spokesman for the dry organizations, interpreted his views as liberal and being of an open mind instead of a fanatical dry, it was officially learned.

29, 1930, for $825, which went to buy a fur coat. The check, drawn on Miss Bow's account, was dated two days before Miss De Voe's discharge from her position as secretary.

When he heard the verdict, Miss De Voe wailed:

"I am not guilty at all. If they wanted to convict me on one count, why didn't they convict me on all?"

Then Miss De Voe burst into tears, became hysterical and collapsed at the counsel table where she had sat since the trial opened January 13. Her limp form was carried out through a hallway and into the jury chambers.

Having recovered a half hour later, Miss De Voe was led to a cell in the county jail by a matron, Judge W. C. Dean refused to allow her bail of $1,000 to stand and Miss De Voe must remain in jail until sentence is passed.

FACES 1 TO 10 YEARS

Miss De Voe faces the possibility of a one to 10-year sentence in prison for the offense. In compliance with the jury's request for leniency, her sentence might be made a probationary one, however.

Miss Bow, still ill at her home with a severe cold, had the following [illegible] when informed of the verdict:

Miss Bow had appeared as a witness at early sessions of the trial, declaring that she had authorized Miss De Voe to pay her personal bills, a salary of $75 a week to her and weekly sums to Dan Gallagher of Miss Bow from a "mutual account."

Testimony presented by the state showed that Miss De Voe had bought clothes and pearls for herself and for Alfred Mathes, her fiance, from this account.

SLAYS WOMAN INFORMER, SELF

ONEIDA, N. Y., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Fear of exposure as a bootlegger, police said today, led Albert E. Suits, 68, to kill his housekeeper, Mrs. Laura Manning, 50, and commit suicide.

Mrs. Manning's body was found in Suits' home, jammed into a three-foot hole under a kitchen trap-door. Suits cut his throat in a hotel in Rome on Wednesday, a day apparently after the woman's head was crushed in and her throat slashed.

The woman's son, Charles Manning, a state trooper, searched two days for her body. Police had found blood-stained blankets in Suits' automobile. Three times the slain's home was searched. Police were about to abandon the hunt of the house when Manning saw an upturned corner of the floor covering and found the trap-door. He collapsed.

Two letters, accusing Suits of selling liquor, were found in the woman's clothing. They revealed Suits had threatened to shoot her if she told. Police said that they had disputed over her wages. Mrs. Manning claiming Suits paid her only $3 weekly instead of the $5 agreed upon.

ENGLISH WIDENS BREAK WITH TOWNSEND

Councilman Promises More Charges; Schooley to Take Up Tax Matter

The open break which occurred between Councilman W. Y. English and Ward Chairman Edward Townsend yesterday, after English made a motion in Council to collect several thousand dollars delinquent taxes from Duquesne Garden, a Townsend holding, appeared today to be "as wide as ever."

English, chairman of the committee on finance, [illegible] the North Side Packing Company, another Townsend interest, of which he was general manager at a salary of $50 a week, [illegible] a meeting Wednesday night.

James F. Gallagher, attorney for the Townsend holdings, said English was dismissed because of the company's wish to reduce overhead and charged the immediate motion to collect the back taxes at the Garden was retaliation."

PROMISES "MORE LATER"

In a statement yesterday, English said he left the company's employ of his own free will and said there would be "more about this later. English would not commit himself on the "retaliation."

Roy D. Schooley, city treasurer, who is one-sixth owner and president of the Pittsburgh Hockey Club and whose duty it is to force collection of delinquent taxes, said he expected to confer with Townsend next week in reference to payments. He said he had suggested to Duquesne Garden officials that money paid by the hockey club for rental when games are played in the Garden be applied to the debt to the city. This phase, too, will be discussed at the parley, he intimated.

WON'T SHUT OFF WATER

Asked whether he thought the city would shut off the water supply at the Garden for non-payment of water rent, Mr. Schooley said:

"I don't think so, because the matter will be straightened out shortly."

City, school and water taxes back to and including 1926 are owed by the Gardens owners, it is said. Of this amount are $18,859.49 in property taxes, $12,537.42 school taxes and $15,491.99 in water rents.

The trio, evidently awed by the shooting, surrendered to the deputies and were held in the county jail here while authorities prepared to file charges.

EDDIE ANDERSON, Chicago lightweight, put on his dress clothes over his fighting trunks, stepped into the ring and married Miss Babe Matthews, the solemn words spoken by Municipal Judge Baffin. The bride retired, having been kissed by everybody in the ring. Eddie took off his dress clothes, won the decision from Billy Vaughn, and started on his honeymoon. All this happened in Omaha. Could anything be more edifying?

THE BRITISH will release Mahatma Gandhi, who has been in prison since last May, and made a very comfortable prisoner, Britain being careful not to make him a martyr.

The trouble is that being released, it will be necessary for him to invent some interesting agitation. A mahatma, like a salesman, must show results.

But poor Gandhi, peaceful at heart, doesn't know exactly what to do with the 300,000,000 that stand behind him. What would Napoleon have done with such a crowd, or one of the great Tartar rulers, or even some leader of Tammany Hall, who would know how to use their votes?

PARK GIVES ANSWER TO FRANK

Prosecutor Replying to Nye Probe Critic Defends His Work in Election Cases

Commenting on testimony of Attorney Ralph H. Frank before the Nye Campaign Committee in Washington yesterday, District Attorney Andrew T. Park today said:

"I stand on my record, which is an open book. I'm willing and glad to stand on the record I made in election cases in Allegheny County. I got the first conviction in an election case in Allegheny County, and personally handled the 83 election cases, the first of their kind under the direction of the then district attorney, now Judge Samuel H. Gardner. I've certainly prosecuted more election boards for alleged frauds than Frank, and should be in position to know."

JUDGE SILENT

Judge James R. Macfarlane has no comment to make on his name being brought into the Nye investigation. He thus upheld the judicial custom of not publicly defending decisions.

Judge Macfarlane ruled on primary day that the Constitution provides election officers and electors, during attendance upon an election, cannot be arrested except on a charge of treason, felony, or breach of surety of the peace. He refused to consider charges of unlawful refusal to vote.

CURBS COURT LATITUDE

Magistrates are not empowered to issue warrants against election officers, and for this reason a judge always sits in Common Pleas Court on election day, so that, if necessary, he can issue bench warrants and act as magistrate. Of late years some judges had been allowing wide latitude in the nature of charges on which bench warrants were issued. Judge Macfarlane, president of the court, took the bench himself last May to stop the practice and restrict the charges to the constitutional limits.

Attorneys for political parties sought vainly to have the judge issue warrants on charges that election officers were refusing to allow persons to vote.

Jurist, Prosecutor Assailed in Hearing

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Charges of fraud in Allegheny County in the conduct of the Pennsylvania 1930 primary and denials that Senator James J. Davis expended large sums in obtaining his nomination easily were given the Senate Campaign Funds Committee yesterday.

Ralph H. Frank, a Pittsburgh attorney, representing interests aligned with Gov. Gifford Pinchot, accompanied his testimony concerning differences in the official count and the recount of ballots in 64 boxes in the county with the statement that two county officials had displayed an "unwillingness" to prosecute election frauds.

Naming President Judge James R. Macfarlane, of the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court, and District Attorney Andrew Park, the witness later acknowledged there may be "an honest difference of opinion" between the two and himself as to conception of their duty. He added he intended no aspersions on integrity of the two men.

POINTS TO HARD FIGHT

A supporter of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, Davis' opponent for the Republican senatorial nomination, added the testimony that Davis had a "bitter fight" on his hands for the nomination in Philadelphia and elsewhere in the state.

The witness, James A. Walker, former secretary of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, said everybody knew Grundy was "a hard fighter" and his opposition required expenditure of "a lot of money" by Davis backers.

Frank, who charged there were "gross frauds" committed in the primary election in the county, was joined by H. W. Bennett, of the county recount board, who said the recount revealed evidence of "tampering" with ballots.

MISS DAISY BECK

Hobson Decides His Days As Kissing Hero Are Past

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Richmond Pearson Hobson, in the days of "Remember the Maine," was a dashing blade among the hero worshipping members of the younger feminine set.

His kisses, bestowed and received, after he sank the old Merrimac in Santiago's harbor entrance, bottling up the Spanish fleet, almost rang around the world.

But he passed one up yesterday. Hobson, now secretary general of the Western Conference on Narcotic Education, came here to confer with members of the Arizona Legislature on uniform narcotic laws. Newspapermen asked:

"Remember your kissing days, Captain?"

"As well, if not better, than I remember the Maine."

"Will you permit one of our capitol's fairest stenographers to kiss you, for the sake of photographic record?"

"I shall be delighted."

But when came the time, the place and the girl, the hero of the Merrimac demurred, saying he came here for a serious purpose, which a frivolous kiss might defeat. Said he, with a touch of sadness:

"I guess my kissing days are over."

FATHER OF 2 CONFESSES SHOOTING

Pleads Wife, Near Death, Be Spared Hearing of Arrest In Gas Station Slaying

International News Service.

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 24.—Two Erie youths, both married, and one the father of two children, who told in written confessions they shot down and killed James Massing, a gas station attendant, five months ago, according to police, today were held in the Erie County prison.

Alois Schliger, 22, the youthful father, cried out, detectives reported, at the end of seven hours' grilling:

"I did it."

"I waanted a thrill. I didn't mean to kill him. It was all an accident. The excitement of it got me."

Richard Hinz, 20, his companion, corroborated the confession and admitted his share in the holdup, state police reported.

WIFE NEAR DEATH

Schliger was quoted as pleading:

"Don't tell my wife—she's dying. My little girl has pneumonia. What a mess."

Four days ago Schliger's wife gave birth to a baby girl. The mother's condition is reported as critical.

The pair told police they were riding in an automobile last August 23 the night of the fatal shooting, Hinz with his wife, and Schliger with another woman. After taking their companions home, the two men passed the gas station as they were cruising about the city. Schliger said his companion told him "that place would be easy." Hinz had worked at the station.

TELLS OF SHOT

Schliger said he proceeded single-handed to hold up the attendant, Massing.

Seeing his pistol, Schliger told police, the attendant slammed the door in his face. He confessed, according to the police report:

"The door hit my hand and the next thing I knew there was an explosion and Massing fell against some oil drums."

Arraigned before a magistrate, the two pleaded not guilty. They were arrested yesterday after a five months' investigation of the shooting.

TREATIES HIT BY BRITISH VISITOR

Declares World Owes Debt To Publisher; Regrets His Warning Not Heeded More

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.—(Universal.) "The world owes William Randolph Hearst a great debt."

Randolph Churchill, scion of a great British family, thus expressed himself in praising highly Mr. Hearst's stand on the Anglo-American naval treaty, Mr. Churchill told members of the Friday Morning Club:

"If more attention had been paid to Mr. Hearst's warnings on such treaties, the world would be in a much better position today."

Naval treaties, said the son of Winston Churchill, who was British minister of munitions and lord of the admiralty during the war, have all been approached upon a fallacious basis. He asked:

"Why should either America or Great Britain consider reduction of armament unless the rest of the world shows a different spirit? Look at the naval competition beginning between France and Italy. Look at the Communists abroad in the world. Look at the other destructive forces.

"Would it not be ridiculous for Great Britain and America to minimize their great influence for peace by disarming? By so doing our only achievement would be to encourage a lot of sob-sister politicians who mistake themselves for statesmen.

"The whole question of a naval reduction treaty has been based on the fallacy that England and America are in naval competition. They are not. Their navies are necessary to their lives.

"It is ridiculous to talk of war between your country and mine. Any sane man knows that a war between these countries would mean the wiping out of civilization.

"The whole thing is just a part of the sloppy thinking and sentimentalism of today."

Randolph S. Churchill was in Pittsburgh January 12 for an address before the Women's Club of Sewickley.

other children, Angelo, aged 8, Anna, aged 6, and James, Jr., aged 4, were sleeping in the rear bedroom. All were hurled from their beds by the explosion which shook the Hill district.

Lancia sent his family away for safety following the blast and placed a relative, Constable Sam Christopher, of Alderman J. J. Verona's office, on guard at his home.

ARMOUR LOSES FIRM CONTROL

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—The firm of Armour & Co., packers, today was headed by T. George Lee, a former stenographer, whose election to the presidency was followed almost immediately by the resignation of Philip D. Armour III, its vice president and member of the company's board of directors.

This executive control of Armour & Co., which for 63 years has had some member of the famous family in an official position, passed completely into the hands of others. The third Philip is a grandson of "Old P. D." Armour, the founder. Armour's withdrawal as an executive was the fourth resignation among members of the Armour family within the past few years. Lester Armour, also a grandson of the founder, resigned as a vice president in March of 1929, and Laurance H. Armour resigned as a vice president in 1926. Laurance and A. Watson Armour, however, remain as directors.

MAYOR HINTS RELIEF ACTION MONDAY

City Officials Keep Secret Plans to Assist Needy Until After Conference

Secrecy veiling deliberations of city officials for several days over unemployment relief, continued today with another conference scheduled for Monday.

At that time Mayor Charles H. Kline has assured reporters, there will be a "good story" for them.

Just what plans have been devised by the Mayor, President John S. Herron of Council, and City Controller James P. Kerr for further aid to the destitute here have not been disclosed. Two preliminary conferences have been held so far.

Following each one, Mayor Kline said:

"I have nothing to say."

It is believed, however, that some means to aid the nearly 10,000 families who were cut off from relief funds when a councilmanic appropriation of $100,000 ran out a week ago today, have been decided upon. Council can do one of two things, or both, it has been pointed out, to relieve suffering.

One plan is that proposed by Herron, by which a fund would be created to give men work on public projects. Council Herron has said, has $25,000 available for such a project. The remainder would be forthcoming from public donations and subscriptions, under his plan.

The second is another councilmanic appropriation outright to the welfare department to save the unemployed and their families from want.

Council is scheduled to meet Monday. Whether legislation affecting relief will be introduced at that session is a matter of conjecture. When officials were asked the status of the proposition the answer, for the last two days, invariably has been:

"Just wait until Monday."

HEATING MEET OPENS MONDAY

Delegates to the thirty-seventh annual meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers will begin arriving in Pittsburgh tomorrow. The meeting opens Monday in the William Penn Hotel and continues four days.

TALKS ON WORK OF MRS. EDDY

The foundation of the entire revelation which Mrs. Eddy has given to humanity in Christian Science is the clear concept of God and man which she gained through ceaseless and prayerful search of the Scriptures, William Duncan Kilpatrick, of Detroit, said in a lecture on Christian Science in Carnegie Music Hall last night. He said in part:

"It is to the Scriptures we all must go if we would know the true God revealed in Christian Science. By way of deduction let us see if we cannot come to a clear concept of God. In the first chapter of Genesis we read this: 'And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; and God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good.' Here we find man a perfect image of God, pure, holy, spiritual and upright."

Pavlowa Danced to Death, Husband, Friend Say

THE HAGUE, Jan. 24.—(INS)—While the body of Anna Pavlowa, world's premier ballerina, rested in a coffin covered with a black silver pall at the Roman Catholic Hospital here, her husband, Victor D'Andre, was en route to London today to arrange the funeral there.

While messages of condolence and appreciation of her art poured in from all corners of the earth, her husband announced [illegible] how Pavlowa's wholehearted devotion to the dance cost her life. He said:

"I am desolate. The great Pavlowa has passed away. It is the tragedy of one who would never give in to disappoint her public. She refused to recognize that she had caught a chill until it was physically impossible for her to carry on longer."

"Pavlowa danced herself to death."

Sothern and Madame Karsavina, the dancer, who was with Pavlowa in the Russian Imperial Ballet, joined and was for many years her intimate friend.

Russian exiles in Paris, overcome at the news, pleaded to have the burial in the French capital, but her husband, before leaving for London, expressed an opinion that Mme. Pavlowa herself would have preferred the British capital for her final resting place. For the past 15 years she has made Ivy House, in North London, her home.

Her death, coming suddenly yesterday after a three-day illness of pleurisy, was mourned as a profound loss to the ballet. Radio messages, cablegrams and letters poured in from all countries with messages of sympathy, and flags on theaters and concert halls here were at half-mast.

A wedding in the East Thursday afternoon is of much interest in the social world, for many folks know the bride and bridegroom, and moreover, a Pittsburgh man, Lawrence D. Forsyth, was an usher.

EVENING ENSEMBLES RETAIN POPULARITY

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—The ensemble is still on the sartorial evening menu for those who are addicted to it. Although one does not see this type of costume as often as one did a year or so ago, it is still to be frequently encountered. And it is generally worn by exceedingly smart women who like each frock to have its own matching wrap rather than to wear one wrap with several frocks. And so it is easy to see that the ensemble is a most costly whim, especially when it is presented in the elaborate materials and costly furs that characterize this season's versions. Shimmering lame has been used to make several of the most successful evening ensembles and lace has been pressed into service for those ensembles designed for wear under Southern skies. Many women like the ensemble that is linked only by a similarity of color, the coat and frock each being of a different fabric. But the ensemble matching both in color and fabric will always have its devotees.

* * *

THE MOST ELABORATE evening ensemble that is displayed is by Callot. It is of lame with a large indistinct pattern on a somewhat dark-hued ground. The colors are dull gold, rather dark blue, mauve and jade green. The sheath-like gown has a long train ending in two points and the clinging coat, dipping in a deep point behind is bordered heavily with silver fox.

Rudy Makes New Friends

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

squirrel's nest. It's like waving a red lamp at a traffic bull.

Rudy showed his sportsmanship by refusing to prosecute the Harvard huddle.

He made a lot of new friends by his criticism. But sometimes a new friend can be too new.

We put up with the same thing at [illegible]. The audience threw [illegible] prizes, tomatoes and [illegible] and rare minerals from [illegible] catalog. But it was [illegible] time and to-day we can never [illegible] where they got the [illegible].

The first European skyscraper has been [illegible] up in Antwerp.

But we are still ahead of 'em because [illegible] latest American stunt is [illegible] two elevators in the same shaft.

No man had ever guessed which way an elevator was going to go. When it stops at your floor and you [illegible] it's skipping south.

If you [illegible] the elevator on its way to the roof, it's not essentially a violation of the pure food laws, but it proves a man who has [illegible] his life's ambition [illegible] for [illegible] substitute.

Two elevators in the same shaft eliminates that. No matter which way you want to go there's an elevator to supply the demand.

That's what is known as mechanical progress. The world is getting smaller. Lindbergh flew the Atlantic in 33 hours. You can go to sleep in Los Angeles and wake up in New York.

The only thing that grieves our feverish scientists is that it still takes two minutes to boil a two-minute egg.

And the Rockefeller Foundation, Thomas Edison and the Carnegie Institute are working on that now.

There's some little details about our modern transactions that mechanics have been unable to circumvent. For [illegible] if you want to carry a bottle of corn upstairs, and [illegible] and [illegible] you must carry it yourself.

Radium may work wonders, but it will not sew on a vest button. Astronomers know that Kazzippus is three billion miles from Umbeloopa and they are [illegible] with it. But if a man [illegible] a road map and leaves out the [illegible] he gets arrested for [illegible].

It shows that we are still human, [illegible]. And maybe it is all for the best. Darwin had [illegible]. Bacon suffered from asthma and Edison only sleeps four hours a night. We just made a statement we [illegible] know a thing about. But that makes us a [illegible] writer [illegible] we [illegible] and [illegible].

What we want to say is that we [illegible] as [illegible] as [illegible] as [illegible] on a mushroom farm. You cannot make luxuries out of collisions. It has been tried with very disastrous results to the sideswiping [illegible].

There is romance in science and [illegible]. Amor in speed. There are [illegible] quite a few [illegible].

For the past few centuries we [illegible] a story all [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. When they put two elevators in one shaft that's when we use the stairs.

MARY GARDEN IN AIR OPERA

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Mary Garden sings the role of Jean in the melodic "Juggler of Notre Dame" on KDKA tonight at 10 o'clock.

This opera brings out the Legend of the Sagebrush—the story of the rose that refused to shelter the little child Jesus for fear of staining its petals, and the humble sage flower that undertook the task so cheerfully and became blessed among flowers.

The "Juggler of Notre Dame" is the last of the Chicago Civic Opera series to be presented this season by NBC.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Professional announcers appear to be becoming less and less essential to the radio journeys of concert stars. Two recent programs of prominent concert artists were conducted by the stars themselves, without any assistance from the noun-and-adjective men.

The maharajahs of the microphone have had no word to say about this latest development in their studios, but if it continues to gain strength—and we have a feeling it will—it will mark the beginning of a new era in broadcasting.

* * *

Jascha Heifetz was the first to dispense with the services of an announcer. He did his own announcing—did it well, too. He remarked casually about the compositions he was to play—a brief word or two, followed by a tuning-up of his violin. Then into his selection without further ado. The plan worked well.

Come now Frances Alda, former operatic warbler and Frank La Forge, composer-pianist, with a similar arrangement of conducting their own programs, their studio door shut tight against any and all announcers, except at the beginning and end of their periods.

* * *

The concert stars of course are opposed to the interruption of their programs with commercial ballyhoo. They are right in their opposition. Sales talk has no place during the progress of their programs. It should be limited to the beginning and end of their periods, and they intend to see before they sign on the dotted lines, that it is so limited. More power to their pens!

* * *

If Leopold Stokowski will not suffer the radio programs of the Philadelphia Orchestra to be marred by the intrusion of advertising chatter there is no reason why Heifetz or Madame Alda or other artists should risk their reputations, should lose artistic prestige by commercial interruptions.

* * *

By dispensing with announcers the concert stars will also effect a welcome note of informality in their radio offerings. They will establish a greater intimacy with the armchairs of the country and thereby increase their own microphonic importance. At any event they are going to be the whole show instead of seventy-five or eighty per cent of it.

If concert stars show no desire to share even a small part of the success of a broadcast with announcers it is easy to see that other and lesser satellites in the radio heavens will follow their example.

* * *

It will be an interesting experiment to watch. It may mean ultimately the subordination of announcers to a position comparable to that which they hold in England. The British Broadcasting Corporation conceals the identity of its attention-callers. In England announcers are called commentators and they are heard only when it is necessary to give a name or to comment upon a program.

The Primary Reason You Should Buy Furniture In This February Sale -is PRICE

There are several sound reasons why we believe there is economic wisdom in purchasing furniture on the basis of price during this February Sale.

These reasons are simple, fundamental and can be stated, plainly and briefly.

1. Furniture prices have touched bottom. If the furniture industry is to survive (and of course it will) prices must go up. Furniture men definitely see this in the near future.

2. A second significant point is made by the fact that there is no longer any distress merchandise (liquidation of the stocks of many hundreds of furniture manufacturers who were forced out of business) to be bought at fifty cents—or less—on the dollar.

We give you these facts for what they are worth to you. We believe that this February Sale of Furniture presents lower prices than will be possible in the sales that will come after this one.

Advance Selection Days February Furniture Sale Begin Monday Morning...

Everything is in readiness to prove conclusively that this store offers you an unprecedented opportunity to own finer furniture... in design, smartness, quality and workmanship... and to know you can buy now to your own marked advantage.

You are cordially invited to come in and inspect the furniture floor during these days of advance selection all next week.

Easy Terms of Payment

BANKER FAVORS ACTIVITY FOR DIRECTORS

Would Pay Working Board Members in Preference To System Now in Effect

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.

New York state's inquiry into the affairs of the suspended Bank of United States again raises the important question as to whether directors should direct.

Advocating active, responsible directors, Harvey D. Gibson, new president of the Manufacturers Trust Company, recently remarked to me that he would prefer paying working shirt sleeve directors a regular salary, rather than continuing the present system of handing out only nominal directors' compensation in the form of gold pieces.

Mr. Rukeyser

At least two of the directors of the Bank of United States, in answering questions, gave the impression that they were only dummy directors, acting as rubber stamps for the active managers.

Nowadays, with vastly more outside small investors on the lists of stockholders of the giant corporations, this question of selecting suitable directors takes on new and important social aspects.

I am in agreement with the viewpoint of Eustace Seligman, able attorney associated with Sullivan & Cromwell, who expressed regret that the laws affecting corporations had not been modified in accordance with the changing character of ownership. The use of the small investor since the war has been characterized by Thomas N. Carver, Harvard economist, as the present economic revolution in the United States.

Nevertheless, as in the old days, directors are chosen by the large and influential stockholders.

COULD BE 'WATCH DOGS'

Public interest would be served by giving special representation to the small, outside stockholders who should be represented by one or more so-called public directors. These public directors, being a minority on the board, would not be expected to obstruct able and conscientious management, but could act as watch dogs in case of mismanagement and dishonesty. They should be backed up by the right, under certain conditions, to use corporate funds for independent audits and other means of independent fact-finding.

A Wall street financier, Malcolm C. Rorty, vice president of the American Founders Corporation, thinks that the time has come for a new shuffle in the matter of choosing responsible directors who will serve, rather than exploit stockholders. He said:

"It is easy to suggest that our great corporations might ask those in political power to name, in each case, one or two directors to represent the public—that our great railways and national public service corporations might ask the President of the United States to select a public representative to sit on each board of directors. This, however, is at best a pleasing hope, for who shall be sure what future presidents would be like, or how strong the temptation might be to find a director-ate for a lame duck senator?"

The amount of outstanding common stock will be reduced to 148,566 shares from 742,830. No new financing is involved or contemplated.

THE NEW SOUTH FREMONT BRIDGE

LIFE INSURANCE SALES LESS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Actual production figures for 1930 by 44 member companies of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents confirm last month's forecast by life insurance executives that 1930's new business would not be much below that of the record-breaking year of 1929, according to information furnished the Census Bureau.

The report of the association to the Census Bureau shows that the actual amount of new life insurance, exclusive of revivals, increases and dividend additions, purchased last year from these 44 companies was 3.3 per cent less than in 1929.

Combining the records of these companies, representing 75 per cent of the new business done by all United States legal reserve companies, the report shows that the amount of production was greater than in any previous year except 1929. Exceeding the amount of new business in 1928 by 1.9 per cent and that of 1927 by 10.3 per cent, the amount of new production last year surpassed the average for the five years, 1925-1929, by 6.3 per cent.

LUXURY BUYING NEEDED NOW

—JOHN H. VAN DEVENTER—

The well-to-do, and those in comfortable circumstances have made an admirable record of contributions to community chests and unemployment funds. In so doing they have opened up their hearts and pocketbooks for the relief of their less fortunate fellows, and nobly discharged one part of their obligation to society.

But there is another important part that many of them have overlooked. Contributions help to relieve depression pains in the economic body, but they are not an antidote for the ills which cause the suffering. Many of these same people are economizing because they think it is the thing to do, not because they have to. As a matter of fact, the buying power of many incomes has been increased during the past 12 months by not less than 15 per cent, due to the decline in prices which has taken place.

One lady of very considerable means, who really could afford anything she wanted, recently said, "I would like to buy a new grand piano, but it does not seem right to spend money for luxuries during these hard times."

The buying of luxuries, by those who can afford them, is just what we need to give industry a real boost at this time. It is not the industries and the workers who turn out necessities who are suffering from this depression. The reduced buying is not in the things we cannot do without, but in the things we can.

So if you are one of the fortunate ones who can afford to buy luxuries, buy them now. Not only will you be helping to cure depression ills, but at present prices you will be getting a bargain that will be impossible to secure a few months from now.

Glass Earnings Show Large Decline

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

EARNINGS OF BOTH plate and window glass makers for 1930 will show sharp declines from the previous year. Companies in this industry are making a poor start for 1931 with production at a low rate. While these conditions apply to most other industries, they are particularly serious for many of the glass producers which have been working on a slim margin for the past six years.

The decline in building operations has reduced demand for all types of flat glass for the past two years. This affected both window glass and plate glass. The slump in automobile production also made inroads in the market for plate glass during 1931. The motor industry normally consumes about half the output of plate glass.

In addition to this, the capacity for making plate glass has been greatly expanded. General Motors Corporation has constructed a large glass plant of its own and nearly all the leading glass companies have been forced to increase capacity as an incidental step in keeping pace with the perfection of new low cost processes which have made old manufacturing methods too costly.

Foreign Competition

THESE RECENT TROUBLES of the glass industry have followed the development of keen foreign competition. Nearly six years ago the European manufacturers of both plate and window glass became important factors in the American market following the restoration of their factories after the war.

In May, 1925, plate glass prices were cut 25 per cent. Later reductions brought glass prices down to about one-fourth of their former level. Window glass prices suffered a similar decline but the percentage of reduction was not quite as large.

European producers were able to take advantage of cheap labor in putting their products into competition with American producers.

Processes Changed

SINCE FOREIGN COMPETITION became a serious menace, the manufacturing processes in the flat glass industry have been in a constant state of change. In an effort to meet foreign prices and to supply new market requirements, the industry has been forced to scrap enormous amounts of old equipment and to replace it with machinery to make glass by new processes.

In window glass the American Window Glass Company has completely abandoned its old method of making glass by blowing cylinders, splitting them, and flattening the glass in furnaces. This company at present is making glass only by the Fourcault method by which the material is drawn from a furnace in a flat sheet.

Continuous Method

THE PLATE GLASS industry has been forced to adapt itself to a change in the demand for various sizes. Before closed automobiles became popular, the major demand was for large lights of glass for store fronts. The market for small sizes was supplied by cutting large lights which were broken in production. The automobile created a new market for small sizes. This could not be economically supplied by the old method of casting large plates of glass and then grinding them.

To meet this change the industry perfected means of drawing and polishing glass in continuous strips. This materially reduced the cost of small sizes.

Another change came with the popularity of shatter proof glass. This requires plate glass approximately half the thickness of the product previously made. The new processes are able to meet this requirement.

Production Reduced

The present condition of the industry can be seen by the fact that production of polished plate glass in December was only 4,941,105 square feet compared with 7,103,295 square feet in November and with 8,482,289 in December, 1929.

For the full year of 1930 production was 105,824,074 square feet. This compares with a record of 150,498,287 square feet in 1929 and with 130,649,435 square feet in 1928.

Bankruptcy Petition Filed Against Firm

An involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed in Federal Court against the Paris Engineering Company, 4301 Main street. The petitioners, the Ohio Piston Company, Schwitzer Cummins Company and the Bohn Aluminum and Brass Company, claims listed, aggregated $3,976.71.

NEW BRIDGES SPAN RIVER BOULEVARD

Eight Structures Reflect Confidence in Future Of Allegheny County

From earliest history roadways have marked the progress of nations. From narrow natural surface lanes and crude bridges to broad, smooth, concrete surfaced highways and gracefully arched bridges are found the milestones of every type of construction known to man, each abandoned in turn for better and more permanent types.

Fulfilling a present economic need and standing out as a landmark to the future is the recently completed Ohio River boulevard. This boulevard, with its bridges, was constructed by three local Pittsburgh contractors, Booth & Flinn Company, Ltd., Vang Construction Company and Harrison Construction Company.

MANY VISITORS

Eight major bridges, each of a design to best serve its purpose, were required to span the ravines and to afford a route for this high-speed traffic outlet through the North Boroughs. All of these bridges are constructed of concrete made with "Green Bag Cement" manufactured by Davison Coke and Iron Company on Neville Island, just across the river from the boulevard.

It would be difficult to find greater beauty and permanence in concrete than that in these bridges. Every architect, engineer and contractor finds much of interest in these imposing structures and almost daily parked cars will be found near them while their occupants view this splendid work.

These structures, with graceful arches and construction of permanence throughout, indicate the views of men of foresight as to what the future holds for Allegheny County.

SEE PROSPERITY IN DRY CHANGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—Prosperity can best be brought back to the United States, 1,208 business leaders of the nation told the Sherman Corporation, by a change in the federal prohibition laws.

Two thousand executives were sent questionnaires asking opinions on breaking the depression. No effort was made to influence opinion, the corporation executives said.

John F. Sherman, board chairman of the business engineering organization, said factors of needed government action were listed. In addition to prohibition changes, the replies advocated as follows:

Reduction of taxes, 1,142; stimulation of public works, 1,117; amendment of anti-trust laws, 993; adjustment of tariff, 987; curtailment of production of raw commodities, 511, and adjustment of gold reserve, 373.

Comments on prohibition included statements 2,000,000 men would be given work by legalized manufacture of liquor, grain supplies would be consumed and revenue sources would be reopened.

BUTLER WOULD CANCEL DEBTS

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—(Universal.)—A plea for the repudiation of war debts in the light of the present world depression was made here last night by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in a speech before the League of Nations Association.

Dr. Butler urged the American people to demand from Washington that steps be taken for the formation of an international commission to restudy the war-debt question.

Declaring the United States was the chief sufferer by the war-debt settlement, Dr. Butler implied that the time had come when the staggering indebtedness incurred by the European nations in the world struggle should be reduced or wiped out.

Dr. Butler asserted that while millions of dollars were being brought across the sea to be lodged in the Federal Treasury, other millions were being paid by American workmen and business men through destruction of values, loss of markets and disruption of trade.

LOCAL FIRM'S BUSINESS UP IN 1930

Head of Thrift Company Says Dividends Paid And Surplus Increased

Business of the Pittsburgh Thrift Corporation in 1930 increased over 1929 in spite of declines in other types of activity, C. R. Anderson, president, declared in his annual report to stockholders. While nearly 1,000 banks with deposits of over $750,000,000 failed during 1930, Mr. Anderson said that there has never been a failure of an industrial bank or a liquidation loss to stockholders.

The Pittsburgh Thrift Corporation has made steady progress in volume and safety. It has paid its dividends and increased its surplus, Mr. Anderson pointed to the fact that the company has actually reduced its percentage of delinquent loans in the face of industrial unemployment.

LIQUIDATING UNIT

Early last year directors decided that the capital was all needed for regular loans and that the general economic conditions prevailing might make the second mortgage business hazardous, so they decided to discontinue making second mortgages and passed a resolution to liquidate the Pittsburgh Thrift Mortgage Company as fast as mortgages matured. No mortgage has been made for more than three years.

This liquidation has been going on since spring and $39,000 was paid into the Thrift Corporation up to December 31. No loss is anticipated in the liquidation of the mortgage company. Each month so far has shown a profit to the parent company.

SURPLUS $94,240

During 1930, the Thirft Corporation, at its home office and its wholly-owned Homestead branch, loaned a total of $739,245. Since its organization is has loaned a total of $3,161,120. It now has a surplus over its capital of $94,240.

Stockholders will be asked to authorize the issuance of preferred stock and investment notes at their meeting on Tuesday evening at the Pittsburgher Hotel. The additional offering will supply increased capital to provide for expanding business.

The increase in capitalization is to be made in this form to preserve as far as possible the common stock advantages to the original investors and at the same time to assure a good return and a high degree of safety to the new.

BANKERS' DEAN SCORES 'BEARS'

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—George F. Baker, Sr., 90-year-old dean of American bankers, said that any man who sells short on the stock market at this time is showing very poor judgment. He also expressed the belief financial condition would improve, although improvement would be slow.

Baker reached his winter home at Jekyl Island, eight miles southwest of here, in a private car over the Southern Railway. He was accompanied by E. E. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, through whom he made his statements.

The aged banker showed signs of suffering from weak legs on arrival here and was taken from his car to the boat landing, a distance of 75 feet, in a wheel chair borrowed from a local hospital.

HOUSE FINISHES RAIL INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—(AP.)—A 10 months' investigation of railroad holding companies has been completed by the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Its report, including a complete picture of the financial structure of every railroad in the United States, will be made public next week.

The inquiry was ordered by the House on the recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, with a view to formulating legislation to extend the arm of federal regulation around holding companies.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Forbes

Raincoats No Longer Needed in Wall Street

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

AT LAST IT has become safe to visit the financial center of the country without wearing a raincoat. Until recent weeks practically every banker was ready to weep on your shoulder.

They now are at least half inclined to think that perhaps after all the United States may live and some day get back to normal business health.

During November and early December the air was blue with hair-raising calamitous rumors. The mere mention of the word "bear" almost caused an apoplectic fit. The whole financial world was pictured as riding to ruin, rather, on a keg of dynamite, a fatal explosion feared at any moment.

That state of mind happily has passed. Some semblance of reason has returned. Bears are no longer viewed as possessing unlimited powers. Stock prices, it is now conceded, may even prove capable of moving otherwise than steadily down, down, down.

This change of sentiment in the highest financial circles is mainly responsible for the mild exhibitions of cheerfulness on the stock exchanges within the last month.

HERBERT FLEISHHACKER, Californian financial Napoleon, arriving in New York this week, was immediately impressed by the disappearance of the acute pessimism which prevailed during his previous visit several months ago. Almost every other recent out-of-town visitor has also noted the change. The nation's financial metropolis has so much influence throughout the country that the victory of hope over fear cannot fail to have far-reaching effect.

NO FEWER THAN 15,000 automobile dealers have been eliminated in the last 12 months. Only the fittest survive "fronting," says W. A. Blees, youthful vice president in charge of the Oakland Motor Car Company's sales, and formerly president of Motor Accounting Company, dealer management and dealer accounting subsidiary of General Motors, "a hardy resourceful group, skilled in sound management and abolition of unnecessary expense."

This keen automotive economist, when I asked him to specify exactly why he felt optimistic, replied thus:

"1. Although something like 1,000,000 fewer automobiles than normal were manufactured during 1930, gasoline consumption increased by 13,000,000 barrels. Thus, the motor public, wearing out its cars faster than they are replaced, is building up a backlog of deferred demand.

"2. Some seven million old and obsolete cars still in service have become more expensive to operate than to replace. Many owners have not yet become aware of this fact, but the arrival of good driving weather in the spring will prove to them the economy of buying a new automobile—and many of them will buy.

"3. Value beyond anything ever before offered is to be found in 1931 automobiles.

"4. The automobile business and many others which had become soft during effortless prosperity have regained their initiative and stamina.

"5. Commodity prices are stronger. Employment is improving. Bonds, always the first securities to move upward after a depression, are stronger. Inventories are depleted.

"The United States, biggest and richest market of all times, remains very much a going concern—a nation of 122,000,000 people spending one hundred billions of dollars annually, and having savings of $28,000,000,000. Nothing can stop a consuming machine of that immensity and power."

So firmly does Mr. Blees believe that the right sales work will produce results that he is taking his entire headquarters staff on a swing round the key cities of the United States to supervise personally the placing in effect of the ambitious 1931 sales program.

THE COUNTRY WILL NOT much longer stay on "dead center."

Fashion Park, Inc. Sales Decrease

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Net sales of Fashion Park Associates, Inc., for December were $2,495,639, comparing with $3,052,386 in December, 1929. These totals are after elimination of sales between companies reporting and do not include sales of those companies controlled but not entirely owned.

Net sales for year ended December 31, 1930, on above basis totaled $25,826,884.

T. G. Lee Elected Armour Director

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—T. G. Lee, a vice president, has been elected a director of Armour & Co., to fill the vacancy on the board caused by the death of F. Edson White, president.

LIGHT COMPANY CUTS OUTAGES TO MINIMUM

No Interruption in Low Tension Network of Local Firm Since 1928

One of the most interesting and more or less unknown phases of generating and distributing current is that of daily inspection of equipment which is carried on for the purpose of keeping all machinery at high efficiency. In doing this the Duquesne Light Company can point to a record that few companies in the United States can equal, that of reducing outages to a minimum. As a matter of fact the local light company has not had an interruption in its low tension network since 1928. This network supplies 70 per cent of the total load in the Golden Triangle, operating since June, 1928, or 30 months, without interruption to service.

Inspection of equipment is carried on by employes of the company at all times. All of the gigantic machinery at Colfax, the new James H. Reed, and the old Brunot Island stations is subjected to frequent inspection and thus no part of the machinery is allowed to get out of order.

REPLACEMENTS MADE

In order to insure safe and satisfactory operation of the various plants, periodic replacements are made, particularly in the condensers which become affected by water which is drawn from the Allegheny and Ohio rivers.

Conditioning the main generating units is one of the major recurrent tasks at a power station. These machines, the heart of an electric utility's service, are so vital to the operation of the company that no stone dare be left unturned to assure generating capacity ample to carry the load.

HARD SCHEDULE

Preparation of a main unit inspection schedule for a system the size of the Duquesne Light Company is in itself quite an undertaking. It involves the prediction of the load during the working season, as the larger units, being a considerable percentage of the system's capacity, can be taken off the line for extended periods only at certain times. The schedule must be co-ordinated with projected major work of the other operating departments, as line or substation outages may considerably alter the load distribution between the power stations.

The 1930 main unit maintenance scheduled was the most extensive ever handled by the local company. Ten machines varying in size from 15,300 to 41,250 kilowatts capacity, were given a general overhauling during the period from February 9 to November 12. Units were dismantled, inspected, repaired and assembled with shutdowns varying from seven to 27 working days without causing the slightest variation from normal service.

EXPERT WORK

Main unit inspection and repair work is not for amateurs. Special equipment for the work weighs many tons and requires high skill in its use. At times single pieces of equipment weighing 130,000 pounds must be removed and replaced in order to carry out the work. Should certain pieces be replaced the thickness of a sheet of paper away from its proper place it would cause great damage and loss to say nothing of possible interruption to service.

In the control equipment the exactitude of adjustment is as fine as that required for the most delicate parts of timepieces. Each blade is checked to determine whether it is sound, not only in its own structure, but also as to the fastening at its base and at each of the lash or supporting wires. Examination with the aid of the microscope is required at times. Eroded edges of blades are silver soldered to restore their original contour. The blades are gauged to find if they are still of the proper length and at the proper angle with each other and with the solid parts of the turbine, and to re-fix them as nearly as possible to their original positions. The magnitude of the section of the work may be judged from the fact that in each of the 41,250 kw. units at Colfax there are about 8,000 individual blades.

Says Retailers Will Recover 1930 Loss

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Frank S. Cunningham, president of Butler Brothers, wholesalers of general merchandise said independent retailers would recover in 1931 some of the ground lost to chain stores in the last several years. A change in the independents' attitude, a greater willingness to battle for business, instead of invoking the aid either of legislation or public opinion, was responsible for the improved position of the one-store dealers, he said.

Calorizing Firm Plans New Plant

The contract for the design and construction of a foundry and pattern storage building has been awarded the Austin Company, engineers and builders of Cleveland, by the Calorizing Company, Wilkinsburg. The new structure will be 96 by 132 feet of steel frame construction, and part two-story. Seventy tons of structural steel will be used. The project represents an investment of $30,000 and will be completed the latter part of February.

GERMAN TRADE TREND DOWN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Although the trend of German business is still downward, the recent slackening of this downward movement, the continued upswing of the export trade, the small volume of manufactured stocks in the hands of wholesalers and low prices for raw materials imported by German industry are relatively bright spots in the situation. Depression is still not pronounced in France, but manufacturing activity is subsiding and unemployment increasing. Only a few seasonal items in Canada show any improvement in demand.

Although business in Japan is still severely depressed, satisfaction is expressed by business leaders over readjustment made and confidence is felt in the ability of the country to take advantage of any general improvement. Chinese trade is seriously handicapped by the silver situation. Trade and industry are still declining in Australia in spite of the unusually good rainfall of the past season. A further decline in New Zealand's import trade is expected as the result of unfavorable exchange developments. The 1930 Hawaiian pineapple crop sold well and the new sugar crop finds warehouses empty making the outlook for the current year good, despite low commodity prices.

SILK INDUSTRY OUTLOOK GOOD

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Volume of silk goods sales receded steadily throughout 1930, and shortages are beginning to accumulate among both converters and ultimate consumers. Mills, however, continue to take large quantities of raw silk, and are currently operating for stock in anticipation of a moderately favorable spring season. Converters have thus far shown hesitancy in entering the market because their over-optimism last year resulted in large unsold supplies. It is believed that accumulating replacement needs of consumers will develop during the first half of 1931, with somewhat increased demand and re-ordering by converters late in the season.

New England Gas Line Planned By Socony

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Plans for construction of a gasoline pipe line which will be the first in the New England area have been formulated by Standard Oil Company of New York. The proposed line, which will be 100 miles in length, will be laid from the company's tank farm at East Providence, R. I., to Worcester and Springfield, Mass., with possible outlets at other points en route.

Plans call for transportation of approximately 1,500,000 barrels of refined products during the first year of operation.

Southern Steel Mills Employ More Men

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 24.—The hum of the steel industry here took on a deeper tone as 200 additional men prepared to don their working clothes today. They will be employed at two plants of the Connors Steel Company, which will resume operations after several weeks' inactivity. Officials said orders on hand promised steady work for several months.

H. C. Ryding, president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, said 1,500 men, who returned to their work last week after temporary layoffs were working full time.

BRAZIL COFFEE TRADE DROPS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—That the ratio of Brazilian coffee entering into world trade has declined markedly in recent years is revealed in a study of world coffee exports which has just been issued by the foodstuffs division of the Commerce Department.

During the five-year period, 1909-1913, the study shows, Brazil accounted for 69.8 per cent of world coffee exports, while during the period, 1924-1928, the Brazilian ratio averaged less than 61 per cent. This decline in Brazil's ratio has been accompanied by changes in the relative positions of other coffee exporting countries. In the pre-war period, for example, Venezuela ranked next to Brazil and accounted for 4.7 per cent of the world's coffee, while Columbia followed with 4.3 per cent. Figures for 1924-1928 show in that period Columbia had risen to second place with coffee exports amounting to 10.1 per cent of the world total, while the Netherland East Indies had advanced from seventh to third place, accounting for 6 per cent.

The average annual world exportation of coffee in the period 1909-1913, according to the study, was over 18 million bags, while the average for the post-war period exceeded 23 million bags. Of this latter amount, Brazilian coffee accounted for 14 million bags.

G. S. Webster, Noted Engineer, Dies at 76

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 24.—(AP)—George S. Webster, former director of wharves, docks and ferries and associate of Ralph Modjeski in the building of the Delaware River bridge, died at his home here. He was 76.

Webster had served the city and state in various engineering capacities for 50 years. He was a former president of the American Society of Civil Engineer and the American Society for Testing Materials. In 1919 he was mentioned as a Republican candidate for mayor of Philadelphia.

Americans Largest Canadian Investors

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 24.—(AP)—American capital constitutes 61 per cent of the total investment in Canada, it was shown in an analysis for 1930 made public by the financial post business yearbook. British investments are 35 per cent of the total.

BUSINESS INDEX HOLDS STEADY

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The ability of business to hold the line is becoming more nice and is far more significant than its failure to make any spectacular gains. This resistance to further general loss has been evident in nearly every indicator since the middle of December, as steel and electric power production, merchandise carloadings and particularly in building contracts pass the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

Commodity prices and stocks have likewise shown a persistently narrow range of fluctuation and on the positive side, the bond market has made a fairly good recovery from its slump in the last quarter of 1930. The index of general business activity has held above the line of 75 per cent of normal for six weeks with a slight upward drift. For the week ended January 17 the index settled at 79.4 per cent, against 80.3 in the preceding week and 96.3 per cent in the corresponding week last year.

All things considered, the more striking because it has come without any injection of large-scale action by central banking authorities to check deflationary financial forces and hasten recovery, and in spite of a hasty political background. Business is now anxiously awaiting to realize that it has to stand on its own feet and make the grade by its own initiative and energy and is rallying its forces with real leadership to the defense of established standards of living upon which its future depends.

ANNOUNCE NEW MODEL TRUCK

A new 1½-ton light duty International speed truck is now being announced by the International Harvester Company. It is called the six-speed special and the chassis will sell for $675 f. o. b. factory, placing it in a price range which will make it available to any purchaser of a light delivery truck. The truck derives its name due to a two-speed rear axle which allows for six speeds forward and two reverse. It is geared from a two-miles-an-hour ratio to a maximum speed of 45 miles. It is made in a 136-inch wheelbase.

St. Paul Loadings Reported Lower

RETAIL TRADE CONTINUES QUIET

Hardware, Paints, Textiles And Building Materials Are in Light Demand

Business conditions have shown comparatively little change this week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Retail trade continues rather quiet and jobbers report buying almost entirely for current needs, with future buying very light as yet. Jobbers of dry goods, men's and women's wearing apparel, furnishing goods and shoes, report but little activity with sports going as there is in small amounts.

Sales of furniture at both wholesale and retail are in moderate volume but some improvement is anticipated next month. Jewelry sales are at present in small volume. During 1930 total jewelry sales was the lowest in a number of years. Hardware, paints, textiles are in light demand and lumber and other building materials continue to move slowly, with construction work light.

OIL PRICE CUT

Demand for sanitary and heating equipment for jobs, quantity and the movement of electric equipment [illegible] below normal. There has been no improvement in the radio line considerable amount of merchandise being sold on the market and from the viewpoint of the trade in general the situation is rather unsatisfactory. A slight reduction is reported in the production of crude oil and inroads have also been reported in some quarters.

No particular change is noted in the collection situation in the district, jobbers still reporting collections as dragging slow.

WINDOW GLASS TRADE GAINS

Distribution of window glass showed some little improvement this week, according to American Glass Review. In other sections of the flat glass market conditions hold virtually without change. Movement of plate glass continued [illegible] and the same may be said of rough rolled and wire glass products.

The slight pick-up in orders placed with manufacturers of window glass while lending some encouragement to the situation was hardly sufficient to indicate any real upward trend in buying. The completion of inventories found jobbers stocks unusually low and some of the new business developed this month was undoubtedly for replacement purposes. Mid-winters are for fill-ins, however, and there is little evidence that the price readjustment of a month ago has influenced buying to any extent.

Conditions in the trade were discussed at a meeting of the Window Glass Manufacturers Association in Chicago, January 20 and 21. During the week no changes of consequence were reported in operating schedules at the window glass factories.

While apathy continues to hold sway in the plate glass branch the outlook is for a steady improvement as increased operations got under way in the automobile industry. Factory output in this branch is at around 50 per cent of capacity.

Canadian Nickel Exports Increase

MONTREAL, Jan. 24.—Exports of nickel, according to Dominion Bureau of Statistics, showed increase of nearly 40 per cent for December over November. Total of nickel in ore, matte or speiss, nickel fine and nickel oxide amounted to 7,145 cwt. compared with 4,872 cwt. in November. Value was $1,485,211 compared with $1,081,035 for November. Exports were about 25 per cent lower than in December, 1929, when exports amounted to 8,421 cwt. with a value of $1,971,930.

GOOD NEWS

The [average] December [was] per cent [above] the [aver]age [for] the [peri]od, but on [the] basis [that] there is a [part]ially [lost] December [a] partially large [increase] crease [would] prove [to] Another test would be the [number] have been [running] with no trend other [than] seasonal business generally [may] ably [does] a [bit] better [in] January than [recent] December [or] even [if] [the] November [rate] tion [may] [have] to November.

It [may] [be] remembered [by] that [during] [the] ceding [months] than [seasonal] November to December [appear] pears [to] have [stopped] [by] an adverse [influence] [in the] [need] for general [business] [activity] [that] [might] to be a sufficient [supply] of good news for the time being. STEEL AND BUSINESS

Interpretation of what has occurred ranges from expectations of further and [market] improvement as voiced by James H. Farrell in his address at Chicago early this week, to fear that part of the call for steel recently was only a flash for stock replenishment purposes, whereby the rate of demand might not continue much less increase. It is on account of the extreme closeness of buyers' orders being small, [in]dividually, with [very] prompt shipment demanded, that the flow of business day to day or week to week is scrutinized so closely.

In other times one might canvass the future of the [iron] and [steel] industries for light on prospective demand for steel, but when business is of its present nature it appears that the members of the [iron] and [steel] trades are [in] no [position] to discern the future, so that outsiders would be rash to attempt to reach definite conclusions. As to forward buying of steel, which in the old days was always [used] as the barometer of trade, that is [out] of the question in present circumstances. There can be no doubt that adequate protection will not be obtainable practically the instant that [orders] are called for while as to prices it [may] require an advantage tendency, not mere stability, to encourage buyers to anticipate. It has been the [general] experience in various departments of the steel trade that advances from present levels could not be undertaken without there having been a material increase in demand.

Bethlehem and U. S. Steel Reports for Quarter Due Next Week

Something of a test confronts the market early next week when the statement of the Steel Corporation and Bethlehem Steel for the last quarter, along with their preliminary annual reports, will be available. The current retreat of the short account naturally will serve to dissipate some of the market's technical strength and leave it in a somewhat less comfortable position to combat the effect of these reports in the event that they should prove as disappointing as has been forecast, but the market has been showing a disposition to ignore unfavorable news of late and at least it can be said that the actual returns of the aforementioned corporations will probably not be any poorer than forecast with a chance that results might be slightly better, if anything.

Several Wall Street houses have been advising clients that the present time appears advantageous for establishing tax losses for the current year. Those firms are of the opinion that the market will be better later in the year. One point made is that during the first half of this year the market will be irregular and discount unfavorable factors which still may exist. Improvement in business will be a big factor later. If it comes as many now anticipate, before the end of 1931, the market should be doing much better at the end of the year, which is the normal time for taking tax losses.

Action of the rails has been most encouraging. Confirming the character of the buying which made this group the exception to reactionary trends recently, the carriers have entered new high territory for the recovery movement this year. That was a signal for considerable new buying in industrials early in yesterday's session. Shorts who had put out stocks only a day or two ago on the theory that another technical reaction was in the making were covering in all groups, mainly because of the strength in the rails.

With most experienced observers still adhering to the view that the market is destined to move in a comparatively narrow trading range over the next month or six weeks its present display of strength becomes the more interesting. The major opinion prevailing is that the market's movements will be guided primarily in the next little while by the status of its technical position. With the public showing little disposition to re-enter the situation in any broad way, it is contended that trading will remain largely in the hands of the professional element and that operations of those traders will follow the line of least resistance. Thus the market is expected to become alternately overbought and oversold in consequence of such operations. But at yesterday's high levels the list appeared to have broken out of its recent trading range and in consequence its action in the next few days will be watched closely.

If it is felt in reserve circles that a still lower bank rate will tend to speed business revival it would seem that credit conditions as revealed in the weekly bank statements justifies a move in that direction at the discretion of the authorities. The remarkably strong position of the reserve as a system, and of the New York bank in particular, is set forth in the prevailing high ratios of reserves to combined deposit and note liabilities. Earning assets were reduced again last week by $91,000,000 in the system, and this contraction, together with a rise of $16,000,000 in gold reserves and a drop of $35,000,000 in total note circulation, sufficed to lift the system's ratio to 81.2 per cent as against 76.3 per cent in the same week of 1930. The ratio at the New York bank is now 85 per cent contrasting with 73 per cent a year ago.

Analysis of the condition statement of reporting member banks in New York city would seem to indicate that some volume of investment buying has been in progress over the last few weeks. It is shown that while the banks were reducing their loans to brokers by $21,000,000 their advances to non-broker borrowers on security collateral declined by $22,000,000. This follows reductions of $74,000,000 and $37,000,000 respectively in those totals the previous week. It is indicated that stocks are, or have been, passing to hands of interests able to hold them on an increased equity basis. Perhaps non-broker borrowers have been steadily reducing their debits, but at any rate indications are that the speculative market is nearer a cash basis than it has been in many long years.

Firm's Electricity Output Declines

The power output of the electric subsidiaries of the American Water Works and Electric Company for December totaled 149,558,029 kilowatt hours, a decrease of 10 per cent from the output of 164,995,996 kilowatt hours for the corresponding month of 1929.

For the year ended December 31, 1930, power output totaled 1,661,335,016 kilowatt hours, or 4 per cent less than the output of 1,931,113,075 kilowatt hours for the year 1929.

SHORTS WARNED BY BAKER

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—George F. Baker, chairman of First National Bank, says any man selling short at this time is showing poor judgment. He looks for slow improvement in business.

Mr. Baker is recognized as the dean of the banking fraternity in New York. As head of the powerful First National his views on business carry great weight in financial circles. The stock market element was inclined to regard his opinion of present short selling as having the same fundamental importance as Secretary Mellon's famous statement, "Now is the time to buy bonds," just before the great stock crash in 1929.

WALL STREET HEARS

That a strong pool has been formed in General Motors, coincident with the appearance in Wall street of a favorable analysis of the stock.

That some traders are prepared to put out short lines again, on the theory that the recent advance has been more rapid than underlying conditions justify.

That unfavorable steel earnings for the last quarter have been largely discounted by the market, and important traders are giving their attention to the prospects for the current quarter, which are as yet rather obscure.

THEATER REVIEWS AND COMMENT, HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM CHAT

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Mr. Pfarr

Although the time of the year, George MacPherson, the insurance man, could not be found on the golf course, he was not idle. He was at the Y. M. C. A. where he was in conference with some golf enthusiasts. In fact, he was in conference with them for two hours. In fact, he was in conference with them for two hours. Scotty was the golfer who said he had played 18 holes on a certain course and was asked how he liked the fairways. "I don't know," he replied. "I haven't played on 'em yet."

On another occasion after he had topped eight new balls into a pond which girdled the fairway, he paused in a set of reliable curses, explaining:

"You can't expect those fish to play with 'em."

The most ingenious golf excuse ever offered by Scotty was one his friend MacPherson, I was no secret to Scotty that MacPherson cared a hearty dislike for snakes. In fact, on the few previous occasions he had encountered them on golf courses his game had been upset woefully.

This particular match was at the half-way mark and MacPherson was leading. Scotty hooked his next shot into the rough and when he reached the ball he began pounding away at the rough with his driver.

"What," asked MacPherson, "is the matter?"

Scotty won the match. Needless to say, there was no snake.

"Sir: Kin Hubbard was wrong if he said that Pittsburgh made him think of Old Susquehanna rye. He should have said that Pittsburgh made him think of Old Monongahela rye. The difference is the same as the difference in the two rivers. The Susquehanna is the most beautiful and most useless river in Pennsylvania. The Monongahela is the grandest and most useful river in Pennsylvania. Big difference there. Highspire was the only famous Susquehanna rye. Monongahela rye included Gibson, Large, Overholt, countless other grand whiskies.

"And this reminds me. The price of a quart of whisky and a day's labor are always about the same. During Colonial times, 50 cents a quart and 50 cents a day. Then $1 a quart and $1 a day. For many years $1.50 a quart and $1.50 a day. Then when the internal revenue tax was raised to $2.20, $5 a quart and $5 a day.

"Now——

"ANON."

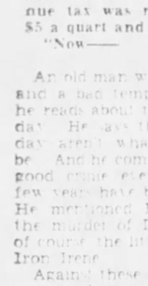
An old man with a gray beard and a bad temper shouts when he reads about the crimes of today. He says the criminals today aren't what they used to be. And he complained that the good crime events of the last few years have been few indeed. He mentioned Paul Jaworski, the murder of Dr. Dapper and, of course, the little gal known as Iron Irene.

Against these he balanced the crimes of some years ago—the Biddle boys who, among other deeds, escaped from jail with the willing Mrs. Soffel, the warden's wife; the Bielstein girl who killed her mother in 1898; the kidnaping of Willie Whitla by Helen Boyle, an event which aroused the nation; the murder of the little Schradle girl by Eddie Eyler; Hugo Bevet, the suspected German spy who blew up his home to murder his wife and a canary bird. These were real crimes, our complainant complains, and not the pillow-whiffle chilblure holdups we have today. He's thinking of moving to some other town.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

PINEBLUFF, Ark., Jan. 24.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Just come from England, Ark., the town you read about where the people wanted food. It seemed mighty peaceful and happy now. Went to the school there where the children were being fed at lunch time all they wanted of fine vegetable soup, cooked in a big vat that had been a whisky still, and presented to the cause by a patriotic moonshiner.



Will Rogers

This is the very heart of the most needy section in America, and yet it's the most fertile land you ever saw. But the country people absolutely have nothing. The Red Cross, as usual, is doing great work. In just these two counties I visited today it is feeding 8,000 families, with an average of six to the family. You don't know what hard times are till you go into some of these houses. Weather is with 'em now, but if it turns cold there will be a lot of suffering. This is not a plea, it's just a report. But it's the worst need I ever saw. Yours,

WILL.

Noel Coward's Play Listed As New Talk Film for Norma Shearer

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.

A talkie version of Noel Coward's "Private Lives" will be Norma Shearer's next vehicle at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Sidney Franklin, encountered at 8 a. m. in a boulevard barber shop, reveals that he leaves Hollywood today to look over the Broadway production in which the author-actor appears with Billie Burke.

Incidentally, Miss Burke comes out here to participate in a stage production of The Vinegar Tree," a fact will not surprise Hollywood, as the actress on her visit here last summer made no secret of her suitrender to the charms of Southern California.

To date no information is available as to M. G. M.'s Shearer's supporting cast in the Coward comedy.

LATEST GOSSIP

Two promoters are in Hollywood with a new racket. They are seeking theaters in key cities where they plan to show feature motion pictures with free admission. Subsequent advertising in the rest of the program is expected to pay expenses and provide the profit. . . . Although Jones, the scenarist to whom Fox gave the axing, Rex, king of wild horses, says he's so fool that he will in turn present the animal to the Los Angeles Breakfast Club to use in initiating new members. . . . Wallace Beery is Hollywood's current favorite as master of ceremonies at premieres. He did honors at the opening of Tradey Horn. . . . Fifi Dorsay has tired of hotel life and has taken a home in Beverly Hills. . . . One of Hollywood's most ingenious dialogulists was stopped cold when a naive visitor from the hinterlands inquired how he kept from duplicating gags.

VON STROHEIM AGAIN

Despite all good intentions, Erich Von Stroheim turned into Universal's 4,000 scene script for the talkie version of "Blind Husbands." Eventually he was persuaded to cut out 2,000 scenes, but the studio demands still further revision. Von, on the other hand, says that every scene now retained is vital to the picture.

Eric Von Stroheim

In the meanwhile, Jean Hersholt is the first player signed for the picture. . . . Production will get under way as soon as Von and the studio effect a compromise.

NEW BILLS TO OPEN TODAY AND MONDAY

Benny Rubin headlines the vaudeville opening in the Davis today. "Once a Sinner," featuring Dorothy Mackaill, will be the screen feature.

E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "The Lion and the Lamb," in film form, comes to the Harris screen today. A new vaudeville program will be presented on the stage.

Any physical health trainer who received a check for $10,000 to restore health and strength to a young man would be apt to use the same methods displayed by John Harrington as the trainer in the comedy, "Young Sinners," which begins a week's engagement in the Shubert-Alvin Monday night.

George Sharp will bring to the Pitt next week a New York play that was taken off the road before it reached Pittsburgh. This time it is "Apron Strings," a comedy by Dorrance Davis.

Seats will go on sale Monday morning in the Nixon box office for the engagement of the Adlers presenting two Jewish plays, "The Stranger," Wednesday night, January 28, and "Without a Home," January 30.

2,500,000-Foot Well Opens New Field

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 24.—An estimated daily production of 2,500,000 feet is being made at a gas well drilled in on the A. L. E. McLain farm, East Finley Township, by the Natural Gas Company of West Virginia, subsidiary of Columbia Gas & Electric Company. Located a short distance from other operations, the well is looked on as opening a virgin field.

A local group has just struck gas on the R. B. Overholt farm, near Lone Pine, with an estimated daily production of 650,000 feet.

SINGER AND BURGLAR ARE AMUSING IN ALDINE FILM

By ROI SNYDER

When a lovely lady, an imperious and capricious prima donna is accustomed to the world's praise and homage, what happens when she meets an Irishman, a singing burglar, who becomes her caveman husband, scoffs at her pretensions and posings and leaves her on their honeymoon? In this case the result is a fine picture, smartly-paced, deftly directed, acrobatic dialogued and pleasantly interesting.

Jeanette MacDonald and Reginald Denny tell you all about it in "Oh, For a Man," in the Aldine. Don't let the inane title fool you. It's a good picture and worth seeing. La MacDonald never before has been so beautiful, nor acted and sung with such sheer artistry. Reginald Denny is convincing and capable as the hard-boiled burglar.

STEALS SOME SCENES

The others in the cast, Albert Conti, Bella Lugosa, Marjorie White and Warren Hymar, have little to do—but they all do it with finesse. The lady who is Laura I couldn't find her name anywhere—steals some scenes, especially the one in which she slyly interpolates:

"Never kill yourself when you're feeling miserable—it's bad luck."

AND—AH—THE DRESSES!

The film will quicken your pulse, still your moods and give you some pleasant moments. And the women will yearn for the clothes Jeanette wears. In short, you'll like it.

Krazy Kat saves the "margin boys" in "Lambs Will Gambol." It's all about the stock market crash. There is considerable humor in it. An all-dog barkie, "So Quiet on the Canine Front" is funny in spots. An interesting short subject, "Curiosity," and the current Metrotone News complete a program of unusual merit.

HELD IN THEFT OF REVOLVER

Forest Shope, 21, of Johnstown, honorably discharged from the United States Army while serving at Fort Meyer, Alexandria, Va., was arrested in Johnstown by Deputy United States Marshal John G. Lowers.

He was released under $750 bond for appearance in the Federal District Court at Alexandria on a charge of theft of an Army automatic revolver. He received his Army discharge October 7, and was charged with theft of the revolver the following day, according to federal authorities.

LITTLE MORE LEFT OF 'THE NEW MOON' THAN TITLE

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Maybe you saw and heard "The New Moon" one of the several times when it was played and sung here. And maybe you went to the Penn Theater yesterday to see it as a screen romance with Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore in the leading roles.

If you did you must have wondered whether "The New Moon" was in another quarter or whether somebody was full.

Instead of New Orleans in the days of the French Revolution, the scene is laid on the Russian frontier, where Khirgiz and Turcomans fight desperate battles.

Hollywood has kept the title and some of the tunes, like "Stout-Hearted Men" and "Lover, Come Back to Me."

The rest is all changed around—maybe because they had some mountain passes and castles, but no bayous, fur caps but no palmetto fans.

MUST BE A BATTLE

"Let's have something like Rafael Sabatini or P. G. Wren," the Hollywood Belascos ordered. "Work in a big battle like 'Beau Geste.' And don't forget a grand ball in a royal Russian palace."

So the big battle is there, and the grand ball, and much slapstick and love-making—all the factory thrills and ready-made laughs.

Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore have fine voices and they do sing—they sing very well when the amplifier doesn't raise their voices to the ear-piercing shriek of a siren.

"The New Moon" is overdone in the effort to make it "tremendous" and use everything on the Hollywood lot. If they did, "Hamlet" they'd make Rin Tin Tin play the Great Dane. They have come very near turning "The New Moon" into green cheese.

THE STAGE SHOW

The stage show is pleasant, even though Walter (Dare) Wahl presents an acrobatic comedy act that is vulgar even if amusing. The Dog Ballet of the Chester Hale Girls was great fun. Ted Claire sang "It All Depends Upon You" his own melancholy way, and with Al Jolson trimmings.

This being David Pesetzki's last week his orchestra played Gypsy Melodies with fire and zest. Dick Leibert not to be outdone, scrambled Baby's Birthday Party and Blue Bells of Scotland" with Rachmaninoff and Rossini on the big organ.

Pittsburgher Held On Liquor Charge

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 24.—State police arrested Harry Wyner, of Douglass street, Squirrel Hill, Pittsburgh, and two companions, Ben Cohen, of Brownsville, and J. E. Biggis, of California, near here, after search of an automobile is said to have disclosed a quantity of liquor. A case containing several flasks of liquor and three pints of contraband were claimed to have been found in the machine.

Mayor's Committee Ends Relief Work

NEW CASTLE, Jan. 24.—Orville Porter, secretary to the mayor's relief committee, announced that it would be necessary for the committee to cease its relief work on Saturday, due to the fact that available funds had been exhausted. The committee has been caring for more than 400 people. What will be done to aid them after Saturday is a problem.

Thug Obtains $285, Victim in Hospital

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Jan. 24.—Louis Wical, 55, New Brighton, was treated at the hospital for injuries to his head, sustained when a thug attacked and robbed him of $285, he told police. Wical said he drew the money from the bank to pay off a note.

Frost

I was so young when you were all that mattered,
So gay—I look back now and see again
A wistful lad who thought that love was shattered
By silly children indolent and vain;
Pain was for them—for us the breathless rapture
Of cloudless days and warm and star-swept nights;
Ours was the whole wide world to gayly capture,
Little we cared for heartbreak or its rites.

Then you were gone—quick as a breeze you vanished,
Nor did you stop to give a reason why;
Love was a game for two and I was banished—
Broken and gray I watched the world pass by;

Once I recall you mocked each youthful way—
Small trace of that you'll find to mock today!

—Don Wahn.

Gag

Gus Shy just opened in "America's Sweetheart" in Pittsburgh. The comedian was worried about the first performance. His agent, Lou Schurr, who had gone on to witness the performance and to cheer up his client, was comforting Shy in the undressing room.

"You'll be a sensation," said Schurr, "you have swell material. You can't miss. I tell you, snap out of it!"

"Come around after the show tonight," moaned Gus, "and I'll tell you whether I'm Clark or McCullough!"

News Item

One of the locals says he is working on a new invention—"The Save-The-Sucker" fountain pen—which automatically stops writing when it comes in contact with a dotted line.

Imagine

Milt Cross was just in the office wondering how a columnist could prepare columns and play in vaudeville at the same time.

"Oh," we replied, "you find material almost everywhere. One of the best yarns I ever picked up was the Lillian Roth story while back stage at the Palace."

"Yeah," said Milt, "I guess you are right. Last year I was so mad because I had to go to a funeral when I had a lot of work to do at the office, and while at the cemetery I observed something that struck an editor so funny he paid me $800 for it!"

Add Swift Thinkers

When the boom was on in Florida, one of the better known Broadway wise guys cornered all the gambling concessions in a town which was wide open. One day a minister called to tell him that he was going to run him out of town, as he was giving the place a bad name.

"Look here, now," said the thinker, "why don't you stop wasting your time and build a new church instead? Here's my check for $100,000 to start with, and here is a list of rich men's names who will kick in with coin also."

That same sundown the man of the cloth called on the racketeer.

"You are a marvelous fellow," he said. "Look, already I have collected $450,000!"

The racketeer then pressed a gun against the preacher, forced him to indorse the checks, and then ran him out of town, confederates taking the man "for a ride" as far as New York and then losing him in the Forty-second street shuffle.

Nifty

Nick, the Greek, the famous sportsman, who has won and lost millions across the dice tables, observes that money isn't the best thing in the world.

"But," he adds, "I like it best."

Argot

Every profession and trade and racket has its slanguage, but the slang employed by hoofers and musicians is among the most puzzling. Take the telegram that The Three Slate Brothers sent to Louis Gress, conductor for the "You Said It!" orchestra when the dancers were engaged for that show at the last moment recently. They wired their music cues in this wise:

"First dance three and a half choruses slow and piano 14 bars tacit and sock ending second dance first chorus piano and hot second and third chorus very fast and furious and fourth chorus slightly slower and go to town."

Description

And Miss Guinan has an appropriate squelch for the type of pest who horns in on your night club table or conversation.

"He is the type of guy," says Guinan, "who knows no strangers!"

As If We Didn't Know

"Everybody likes gossip. There is in all of us that ingrained hypocrisy which makes us affect to despise the quidnunc, while we break our necks to hear what he has to say, and run our legs off to repeat it—and with what gusto! Scandalmongers—aren't we all?"—C. W. Wilcox in Feb. Scribners.

By Way of Report

He is one of the stage's best "low" comics. His jokes, songs and other routines may contain a "blue" gag now and then, but he is vigorously opposed to anything shady concerning women. These midnights-to-yawnings, he also appears in a cabaret where he warned the management he would not tolerate the showing of girls in the nude.

"But," he was told, "nearly every other cafe on Broadway features undressed girls, why are you so particular?"

"I'm not particular," he replied, "I just don't like to work in a place where girls have to go around naked to make a living. I walked out of one place last year for that reason."

Which is true!

His name is Jimmy Durante.

SHERIDAN AND FULTON SCREENS HAVE CLARA BOW

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Clara Bow isn't a dramatic actress. She may have "It," she does have curves, but she lacks depth in her acting.

She came to the Fulton and Sheridan Square screens yesterday in her latest picture, "No Limit." It is melodramatic romance. It is all about a little girl, who marries a handsome crook when she thinks she's marrying a millionaire.

Of course, she becomes disillusioned and all that. But when the coppers come, she's true to her man. Why, she's even willing to take the "rap" for him. But he won't let her. He's a gentleman as well as a crook.

Miss Bow doesn't seem able to get away from the old silent day movie formula. She is good in the clinches but in moments of real drama she isn't so hot—in fact, she's quite cold.

Norman Foster measures up well in his crook-hero role. Harry Green and Stuart Erwin put in some comedy. And, believe it or not, Irwin's presence certainly is a big asset.

STANLEY PRESENTING GOOFY FELLOWS ON SCREEN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

All the cuckoos aren't in clocks. All the goofy people aren't in asylums. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are still at large—and not still either. They're down in the Stanley in a film affair, titled "Hook, Line and Sinker."

Chances are that you'll swallow it all like we did. But the reaction that comes after it is all over depends on your individual state of mind. Maybe you'll imagine you had a hilarious time. Maybe you'll want to shriek for a padded cell.

Some day the guards may catch up to Messrs. Wheeler and Woolsey. But until then may nonsense be unconfined!

The boys are seen as a couple of looney insurance salesmen who have a line of talk that sounds like a Bugs Baer column. Right away they meet a pretty girl who owns a hotel and from then on they are in the hotel business. They put the dilapidated place on the map, so to speak. They advertise it as a rendezvous for the smart set and attract all the smart crooks.

Wheeler is head over heels in love with the girl. But mother doesn't like him. However, Woolsey is the gosh-darnest fellow when it comes to ideas. He figures he'll marry the mother, becoming the girl's father and then okay the match.

Dorothy Lee portrays the girl. The cast also includes Natalie Moorhead, Ralf Harolde and Hugh Herberts. Mr. Herberts plays a house detective. He's that quiet comic that has been wandering in and out of various films of late. And, if he keeps up his good work, he's going to "steal" a picture some time.

"On With the Dance" is the new Ed Lowry stage show. Mr. Lowry, vocally, goes "Walking Home With Baby." He also goes into a trance in Norman Frescott's mind-reading burlesque. Erner and Fisher, not new to our town, get a large hand with their comedy dancing. Herschel Henlere is the best thing on the bill. His is labored comedy, but he goes in for a piano jamboree that is clever. He rolls the melodies together like nobody's business. He is a pianist!

Others are on the bill, including the dancing girls and Organist Armstrong.

Auto Victim Given Award of $5,000

A verdict awarding $5,000 damages to James F. Harkins, street car motorman, has been returned in Common Pleas Court in his suit against Samuel Gettleman, proprietor of a cleaning establishment at 5638 Penn avenue, for injuries he testified he suffered when struck by Gettleman's automobile. Harkins was throwing a switch at St. Clair street and Penn avenue, June 5, 1928, when the machine, driven by Gettleman's son, he claimed, knocked him down, causing injuries to his spine and limbs. He sued for $15,000.

ONCE FOES, BIG SCHOOLS NOW FRIENDS

A SINGLE DECADE can make a lot of difference in the relations of colleges as well as of individuals. Little more than 10 years ago wild-eyed students of Pitt and Carnegie Tech were taking round-house swings at one another between the halves of a hotly-contested football game at Forbes Field. And for several days thereafter there were pitched battles all over the Oakland district whenever groups of Panther and Plaid supporters happened to collide. So serious was the student outbreak that the athletic authorities of the two schools deemed it wise to sever all sports relations. For three years, from 1920 to 1922, inclusive, Carnegie and Pitt did not meet in any branch of athletics.

Guy Halferty

Now comes the news that Ray Barger, captain of the Carnegie track team, and half a dozen of his mates, on Coach Halferty's squad, have been working out for some time at the Panther indoor quarters. The Tartans have no protected place for their track and field men to train, and it is through a special invitation of the Pitt athletic authorities that the Plaid boys have an opportunity to train indoors. This would have created a sensation 10 years ago, but now it serves only to show the friendly relations between the two institutions.

LOOKING BACK OVER the history of the heavyweight class, Joe Vila observes that Max Schmeling is the first champion of the big division ever ordered to defend his title within a specified time. Except in the case of Jim Jeffries, quick reappearances in the ring have not been fashionable since the era of gloves began with the Corbett-Sullivan fight in 1892.

Corbett fought only twice as champion in five years. Fitzsimmons once in two years. Jeffries nine times in four years. Johnson five times in seven years. Willard twice in four years. Dempsey six times in seven years, and Tunney twice in two years.

AFTER DEFEATING SULLIVAN, Corbett waited two years before beating Charley Mitchell and three years more before losing the crown to Fitzsimmons. Fitz remained idle for two years and was beaten by Jeffries in his first title defense.

Jeffries, the busiest of them all, beat Tom Sharkey four months after winning the championship, and during the next three years defeated John Finnegan, of Pittsburgh, Jim Corbett twice, Hank Griffin, Joe Kennedy, Gus Ruhlin, Fitzsimmons and Jack Munroe.

JOHNSON'S ONLY TITLE battles before he lost to Willard were with Fireman Jim Flynn and Frank Moran, the Pittsburgh heavyweight. Willard bested Moran in a 10-round no-decision bout and then loafed more than three years before Dempsey dethroned him. Dempsey beat Billy Miske, Bill Brennan, George Carpentier, Tom Gibbons and Luis Firpo in four years, and then remained idle for three years before Gene Tunney toppled him. Tunney fought Dempsey again, followed by Tom Heeney in two years, and then retired.

Bob Walsh

THE ACTION OF the New York Yankees in releasing Pitcher Bob Walsh, son of the original Ed Walsh, once famous spitballer, to the Jersey City club in the International League, breaks up another pair of brothers in the big baseball show. Bob's older brother, Ed, Jr., also a pitcher, is a member of the Chicago White Sox.

Joe and Luke Sewell have been separated at Cleveland by the dropping of the former, and both Bob and Irish Meusel may be missing this year, as Bob is slated for release at Cincinnati and Irish has been dropped as coach of the Giants.

EARLIER IN THE winter the Yankees cast adrift Bubbles Hargrave, brother of Bill, the former Detroit catcher now with Washington, and last season a brother battery was split by the Red Sox management when Catcher Alex Gaston, brother of Milt, the pitcher, was dropped. Last spring the Bucs tried a brother of Heinie Meine but didn't keep him.

The Pirates have the only pair of brothers now one one club in the majors in Paul and Lloyd Waner. The other sets remaining are Wesley and Rick Ferrell, of the Indians and Browns; John and Joe Heving, of the Red Sox and Giants, and Earl and Tom Clark, of the Braves and Senators.

HARRY M. MALONEY writes to protest against the action of the Pitt basketball team in "playing statue in the middle of the floor when the Panthers have the lead and the opposing side is using the zone defense." He says the spectators are the sufferers and thinks some action should be taken to fix responsibility for the delaying of the game, as in football the offending sides is penalized five yards. "A football coach would scarcely need to tax his brain devising ways and means of penetrating the enemy defense if the regulations in football permitted the stalling tactics used by Pitt in these games," he adds.

THE CORRESPONDENT CONTENDS that "if the man-to-man defense, which places a premium on physical condition, were universally adopted, the spectators would not have to endure these shabby exhibitions." In support of their style of play when ahead, Coach Carlson and his players say they could not well use any other system against such a zone defense as West Virginia's, for instance, which they term the closest in basketball.

Their argument is that the refusal of opponents to come out from under their own basket means that the attacking team has no chance to sneak through a space 17 feet long, which is not difficult for five men to defend. "They're free to come and try to take the ball from us if they can," is the counter. "Why not blame them?"

COACH AND PLAYERS say that if Pitt had a lot of big men who could successfully use the rough game necessary to penetrate such a defense it would be all well and good, but that for the last couple of seasons the small size of the Panthers has hindered them.

Charles F. Adams.

And anyhow, they point out, since last year the rules committee has made a ruling on stalling which is intended to allow the leading team to hold the ball as long as it wants to do so if the defensive team refuses to come within a yard of the ball. In other words, they argue, it is the defensive team, not the one freezing the ball, that is held to be guilty of stalling.

THE TRIP TO the world amateur hockey tournament at Kyrnica, Poland, on which Boston's amateur club, designated as the A. A. U. sextet, has just departed, was made possible by a late financial rally prompted by Charles F. Adams, owner of the Hub professional team. It looked to be all off when the management could raise only $1,250, just half of the sum required, of which Adams and the A. A. U. contributed $500 each, but Adams finally suggested that a collection be taken up at the Bruin-Ottawa game in Boston the other night, offering to contribute the necessary balance himself. There was no balance to be made up. The fans donated so handsomely that the collection totaled $1,647.26, or $397.26 more than was needed for expenses. The collection included 360 half dollars, 2,560 quarters, 2,750 dimes, 3,000 nickels and 1,726 pennies, in addition to $385 in bills and checks. It required three hours for the hockey players and rink employes to count the 10,396 coins.

By JESS CARVER

Having half way settled the annual basketball argument with one another, with honors going to Pitt, Carnegie Tech and the Pitt Panthers hie themselves to foreign fields seeking laurels tonight.

George Nease

The Panthers swing back into the Middle West for a tussle with Notre Dame. Carnegie invades the Beaver Valley, there to battle Geneva College's Covenanters on the Beaver Falls High School court.

Pitt, triumphant in 10 out of 13 starts this year, hopes to add the scalp of the Irish to the already impressive list of victims, which includes New York University, Dartmouth, Fordham, Syracuse, West Virginia and Carnegie Tech in the East and Nebraska, Purdue, Marquette and Ohio State in the mid-west. Creighton, Western Reserve and Indiana have taken the measure of the Gold and Blue.

LAWRY TO BE BENCHED

Coach Carlson intimated last night previous to entraining with his squad of nine ballplayers, that he'd start the new combination he has been testing out in practice sessions this week. This consists of Co-Capt. Willie Arture and Milt Cohen, at forwards; Bus Albright, at center, and Don Smith and Doc Kowallis, at the guards. Tim Lawry, star of the victory over Tech, will be perched on the bench for the early part of the ball game. Capts. Arture and Baker, the two Kowallis boys, Smith, Al Wrobleski, Lawry, Albright and Cohen made the jaunt to South Bend.

Notre Dame has been beaten thrice to date, losing to Northwestern twice and to Purdue. They've won eight.

The Tartans, their disappointment over losing to Pitt still keen, engage a desperate Covenanter quintet which has found the going exceedingly rough this season. The Genevians, despite the presence in the lineup of stars of the caliber of Capt. Montgomery, Aultman, Grahme, Knapic and Sole, have been able to win but one out of five starts from tri-state district rivals.

TECH EAGER TO COP

Coach Hogan, of Tech, expects to start the same lineup against Geneva that battled the Panthers so valiantly Wednesday. Capt. George Nease, due for a scoring splurge, and Bob Smith will be at the forwards; Eddie Stentz is to go at center and Red Fergus and Jimmy Leonard at the guards.

Carnegie's as anxious to resume its winning habits after the Pitt setback as Geneva is to start one.

In a Tri-State Conference battle at Greenville, which may cause great dismay in certain circles by winding up in an upset, Thiel and Westminster clash. The Lutherans hardly figure to take the unbeaten and undoubtedly formidable United Presbyterians, but then, one never can tell.

Slippery Rock and Indiana engage in a teachers' college tussle at Indiana to complete the district program.

In addition to the Army teams, the league is composed of the Shady Side Academy riders and a team representing Vang Construction. The Academy and Vang trios will clash in the second game of the league season next week. Games will be played each Saturday night, until April 11.

As a feature of the opening ceremonies, County Commissioner E. V. Babcock will throw out the first ball.

Tonight's clash promises to be a battle between a pair of fine No. 1 riders, Lieut. Tommy Ward, of the Artillery, and Lieut. Mayusan, of the Cavalry, are fine polo ists and excellent horsemen. Lieut. Mayvuzan, who played at Norwich University, is regarded as one of the more fearless as well as clever, riders in the district.

The veteran Lieut. Watson and Lieut. Perritt will ride at the No. 2 positions for their respective teams. Lieut. Watson starred for the Artillerymen last year and, against the Princeton University D team here three weeks ago, shared with Lieut. Ward the brunt of the Artillery attack.

The Artillery will start with Lieut. Reed at No. 3 and Lieut. Linton will be back for the Cavalry.

PIE GOES WEST NEXT WEEK

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Capt. Pie Traynor and Pitcher Heinie Meine, of the Pirates, accompanied by their wives, will leave St. Louis next week for Los Angeles where the two athletes will await the coming of the first squad of Buccaneers.

Pie Traynor

Traynor and his bride have been honeymooning at Luxemburg, near St. Louis, the suburban town being the home of the pitcher. Meine, who recently was reinstated to the Buccos, writes the home office to the effect that his health is much improved.

Heinie left the club last year in bad condition, but since that time has regained his health. Removal of his tonsils appears to have been a big benefit to the tall right-hander, who states his weight and strength have returned.

The athletes and their helpmates will make the long jaunt to the coast in Meine's automobile.

Handball Fans Honor Flannery

Handball enthusiasts will gather tonight at Keystone A. C. to honor J. R. Flannery, former national junior champion, at a testimonial dinner. The affair is sponsored by the handball committee of the K. A. C., assisted by the committee from the P. A. A. and the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

Jacob Shulgold will serve in the capacity of toastmaster. Speakers will include James C. Mace, of the Downtown Y. and G. D. Shrum, of the P. A. A.

TONIGHT'S GAMES

Detroit at Cleveland.
Syracuse at Buffalo.

By CARL W. SHATTO

Two of the highest scoring teams in the International League will be opposed at Duquesne Garden tonight when the fast-going Yellow Jackets and the Windsor Bulldogs clash in the fifth game of their season series.

Cleveland leads the circuit in goal getting, with Windsor second and Pittsburgh a close third. In their two previous meetings here the Jackets and Bulldogs battled to 4-4 deadlock, and another high-score thriller safely can be anticipated, for both spurn "safety first" tactics and favor an open game.

FAVOR OPEN GAME

The records reveal that of the seven clubs in the loop only London has coped with the Bulldogs' high-powered attack more successfully than has Pittsburgh, and London gained the edge only after signing Romnes, a team and a half in himself, early this month. The Jackets attribute their even break in the season series with the invaders to the fact that they elected to combat Windsor's open game with a wide-open attack of their own, and these tactics will be continued in the all-important "rubber" duel.

The Bulldogs were in a rather savage mood when they arrived here today. Early this week they were crowded out of second place in the race by London after holding the runner-up berth since the opening of the campaign. Pittsburgh and Cleveland, too, have been cutting down their lead, and they realize that they either will have to stage a rally or be crowded out of a play-off berth.

The Jackets, boasting a success string of three wins and a tie and climbing with fine consistency, are spurred on by ambition rather than desperation. Tonight's battle will answer the question of whether ambition or desperation is the better spur.

The Pittsburgh victory over Detroit on Tuesday enabled the locals to tie Cleveland for fourth place, but the Indians forged ahead by picking up a point at the expense of Syracuse on Wednesday. The race is so close, however, that the Jackets can regain fourth place and move up to within two games of second place by putting poison in the Bulldogs' meat.

Both teams are in top form for the joust. The Jackets now are stronger than ever before, and the Bulldogs are at full strength. Duke McCurry has recovered from an arm infection which handicapped him in the Detroit game, and he may displace Cam Proudlock at left wing on the starting front line. Coach Charles Reid is not particularly eager to make a lineup change while the team is winning, but Duke has teamed with Gregg and Ouelette so well in practice that a new front may be deemed advisable.

LOCAL FANS AROUSED

The advance ticket sale for tonight's game is the heaviest of the season, according to officials of the local club, and indications are that standing room will be at a premium.

Only an exceptionally brave or exceptionally foolish man would attempt to forecast the winner in a Pittsburgh-Windsor duel. Both clubs boast three strong and well-balanced front lines and the outcome depends on which defense combination can best hold up under the strain. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Windsor
Fraser	C	Benedict
Fraser	L. W.	Bellemer
Bastien	R. W.	Arbour
Daniels	L. D.	Robinson
Wentworth	R. D.	Duguid
Moore	G.	Phillips

BULLDOGS COP

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 24.—(AP.)—The winning ways of the London Tecumsehs were abruptly halted when Windsor Bulldogs turned them back 1 to 0, in the most exciting game of the season here last night.

Class C Squash Final Carded Today

The final round of the Class C squash racquets championship tournament will be played at the Keystone A. C. today before the start of the team match between the Keystone A. C. and P. A. A. in the local inter-club league. J. S. Gish and A. R. Lughborough are in the title round.

In another league match, Pittsburgh Golf Club plays at the Allegheny Country Club.

P. A. A. is leading the league with four victories and one defeat, and the Keystone Club is second with three and one.

Other teams in the loop are the Pittsburgh Golf Club, Allegheny Country Club and the University Club.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XII.

After Gans and Nelson signed up for a finish fight in the only state in the Union which permitted legalized prizefights, Tex Rickard's fame as a promoter, unknown as he was, came into being. The chances are that Tex himself was a bit startled over the result. If he had sought to put Goldfield and place it on the map, he couldn't have hit on a more fantastic subject. After all, he had reached from the sagebrush and yanked out of the greatest lightweights of all time right out of the arms of the California promoters. Jim Coffroth, Tom McCarey, Morris Levy and the others. Scrapped at back and said this Goldfield madman would run himself into a noose and end his career with the one project.

No such guarantee had been heard of up to that time. It wasn't the money that was bothering Rickard. It wasn't the fear that he might not draw a crowd big enough to pay off. Tex had the money in hand. The pile of $20 gold pieces in that bank window was enough to insure the fighters. It wasn't stage money, either, that, at least, was something in those days.

Joe Gans

SURPRISED BY INTEREST

It wasn't that old fox Rickard's strange being, was born the great desire to be a sort of Barnum. I don't mean that Tex wanted to tote any white elephant's bearded ladies, ossified men, Jo-Jo, the Dog-Faced Boy, or Jumbos around the country, but he did glory in the years to come in pulling aside the curtain that public curiosity might be satisfied in beholding such shaggy giants as Jeffries, Willard, Johnson, Dempsey and Firpo. Since Rickard's death, I've often wondered what he would have said and done at the sight of the astounding Italian, Primo Carnera. Tex would have found the proper spot for this giant of giants and you can bet that it would have been the "biggest show on earth."

Tex kept waiting for another "bigger and better Firpo." He talked of it constantly. Carnera would have been water on his wheel, although Tex didn't have a Dempsey left as one of his pawns. At that, Tex might have done plenty of coaxing. He could make Dempsey do anything, even to breaking a resolution never to fight again.

"When those two young fellers came into town and said they represented the San Francisco Bulletin, I thought they were kidding me and looking for free tickets," Tex said one day.

"They had a photographer with them and they asked me to pose for my picture.

"What you fellers want my picture for? You don't mean to tell me that any outside newspaper is interested in this light. You ain't tellin' me that your paper is going to print my picture, are you?"

McGeehan insisted that it was on the level.

"Well," said Tex, "I'll go behind the general store there and you can take it. Don't let anybody see you snappin' it through. You fellers ain't goin' to bring the laugh down on me."

"We went behind the store and they took the picture. I still thought they were kidding, but I opened my eyes when I saw them stretchin' a banner from their hotel window clean across to the other side of the street. The banner read: 'Fight Headquarters of the San Francisco Bulletin. Read the Bulletin and get all the news of the great championship fight.'

"And with their coming," added Tex, "more and more of the newspaper boys landed in town. They even came from New York, and I just couldn't get over it. Every newspaperman was trying to outdo the other fellow. The result was that people in the neighboring states, all over the country, in fact, got interested and the bloomer the other promoters talked about blossomed into a money maker."

FIGHT IS PROFITABLE

The gross receipts of the fight went to $69,715, the largest amount ever taken in at a lightweight bout any place in the world up to that time. Of course, that old record has gone a-glimmering long ago, but in those days it dumbfounded the sports world.

There were 18,000 persons in attendance, with an additional 500 or more heads. There were some 1,500 women present and they came from all over the world.

With a normal population of some 2,500 persons, Goldfield fairly bulged on the day of the fight. The night all told set back Tex $14,000, leaving a profit of more than $10,000. That profit sent Tex on the hunt for fame.

And all done without his personal bullhorn man! Tex didn't know the meaning of the word "publicity" in those days. He would have kept it a "private" fight if the newspapers hadn't sent their scouts in like an invading army.

WEIGH IN RING

After all, Tex was putting on a much more important bout than he imagined he was staging. Nelson had won great renown as the battler who had whipped Britt Hardon Colbell and Caffey, the cream of the Australian crop, and now that had been smoked out after two years of lolling to make the weight. It was indeed a world championship affair and would be worth big business on the big

Of course, the battle itself is ancient history. Gans was forced to fight his heaviest battle in the first round when Nelson, after being floored, got up and rushed Gans to the ropes. Somewhere Nelson had the strength left to land a right-hand punch that a thrown mule might have. Gans dropped to the floor and lay there. He was up at the count of nine, but Nelson was on him like a tiger

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

People Who Are Sorry for Selves Get Nowhere

They tell tales like this over the copy desk when the last edition's gone to press, and the boys get to reminiscing—

Once, he was a man—

An unstanding, self-respecting youngster, with the world before him. He had everything. Health, youth, a college degree, talent. And once, too, knew the hurry and grind and roar and thrill of helping to make the wheels go round on a big metropolitan daily—

Then he lost his job . . . when jobs were scarce. For a while, he tried to get another with little luck. Life became a jumble of hand-to-mouth days, sustained by brief clerking positions, and even day labor. When that jolt came, he began to get sorry for himself and finally decided that if he couldn't lick the world, he could lick Old John Barleycorn.

Worked Hard

Today, he writes this:

"Dear Sally:

"I'm drunk.

"No—that doesn't constitute an exclamation point. It's too habitual to rate anything like that. And I'm also broke . . . in pocket and spirit. And I've a fearful case of yearning for home. And—but why list any more?

"I'll tell you my story, as one former newspaper man to a going newspaper woman. It's a long one, but I'd like to see your answer in print. It may help me to snap out of it, and it may save me from making a terrible mistake.

"I was graduated from a Pacific Coast university at the age of 20, with a degree. There soon followed a job on a big newspaper. The usual grind. 'Leg-man,' then rewrite, and then copy desk. In the meantime, came some traveling and a few short stories that got by.

"I was married at the age of 24 to a marvelous girl. One who was accustomed to the niceties of a family in comfortable circumstances. For two years I worked hard and it really seemed as if, in a short time, I'd be somewhere. At that time I was slot man on one of the leading Middle Western sheets.

Visited by Misfortune

"Then came one of those shake-ups the readers never hear of. I was let go and jobs were scarce. Well, things got tougher and tougher. And in six months I owed my in-laws over $200.

"Then my wife left me. Oh, I don't blame her. Hand-to-mouth existence. Little jobs of office work. Trying to sell. Even day labor. It's six months since she went, and now I'm nothing but a drunken bum. I can't even write any more. This letter proves it. Slip-shod. The old pep gone. Or is it the incentive? I'm even too broke to afford decent paper to write on. Sometimes I wonder if there's any self-respect left in me.

"Sally, I don't want sympathy. And this 'strive-and-succeed' stuff doesn't work. Won't you give me some straight-from-the-shoulder stuff (there didn't I tell you I was through as a writer)?

"What chance have I? I'll be watching for your answer.

"ONCE A MAN."

"P. S.—I forgot to tell you, my wife says if ever I can repay her folks, things may be different. Funny what money can do, isn't it?"

Well, partner, you certainly have put yourself in a tough spot, haven't you? No, I'm not kidding you. I'm telling you seriously that nobody is responsible for where you are but yourself. Get that, and get it straight!

Sure you had a tough break. But what of it? There's nothing new or unusual about tough breaks. We all get plenty of 'em. I've had oceans of 'em myself. And the only reason that I'm a going concern today is that I didn't sit down, fold my hands and let 'em get me. It isn't the tough break that breaks us, it's what we do about it. And you did plenty with yours, didn't you? You bet you did!

Must Show Spunk

You say you didn't want folks to feel sorry for you. Well why should they, when you're so fearfully and romantically sorry for yourself? Snap out of it! You're not the world's record abused citizen. You're the world's record spineless dishrag! And so long as you go around blubbering about being "through" you'll keep right on being a dishrag. And no human being can help you, because you won't help yourself.

You're not through. Not if you show a little pep and spunk, if you're willing to look yourself square in the eye and face your troubles like a grown man, instead of a cry-baby. What you've done before, you can do again . . . if you'll make the effort.

As for incentive, what more could you want? What more could any of us want than success, and self-respect, and winning back our place in the world? Perhaps babies have to be pampered into doing their stuff. But you're not a baby, quit acting like one.

As for your wife, she probably cared a whole lot more about having you show spunk enough to straighten up and earn that $200 than she does about the money itself. And I suspect that this "drunken bum" line of yours is nothing more than a childish attempt to hurt her and then blame her for the result. You're just trying to "go out in the garden and eat worms."

Quit whining, man! If you are so sure that you were once Big Time Stuff, prove it now!

TO SEE—OR NOT TO SEE

Would She If She Could?

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Everyone has wished, looking into the mysterious, lovely light in a crystal, that some of the hidden things of the future would look out at them.

Everyone has THOUGHT they wished it—at the least. Making a halt before the delicate fascinations of an optician's show-window, this mysterious person, EVERYONE, has often seen a crystal there, like a transparent world, reposing upon a bit of rich velvet. And ever since childhood almost everyone has felt the allure of the sparkle and light, transparent darkness and shadowed glow, the clear water struck to stone as if by a wizard, of that crystal. The same allure of that other world that seems to lie beyond the looking-glass. A silent, watchful, magic world, that always calls you to come just 'round the corner! And that same everyone has thought, wouldn't it be nice IF the images of the future, of what was going to happen, could show themselves there!

And then, thinking again, everyone has thought perhaps it wouldn't be so good. Thought that if the future suddenly began to appear in the crystal, he or she would quickly put their hands before their eyes—and move on. And would walk on the other side of the street if they should come that way again!

Does a bride want to know her future? Does she wonder? Before she is engaged she sings, "Heigh ho, when shall I marry me?" But in bridal satin and lace, mist and flowers, blinded by the sunny glitter from a gold ring, does she ask to see any pictures of what fate holds for her, of the undying fairy boy whom she has given her heart to tear?

The old-fashioned bride didn't, I think. But maybe many of the present brides do; what with the wrecks of unhappy and brief marriages that strew the ocean lanes of matrimony.

What faces of herself would she see—laughing one, or one in tears? The singing bird and the golden apple of happiness, or lost and strayed beliefs? A girl's face grown into a woman's of course—but will it be marred by cynicism, or sweetened with illusion realized? Maybe if some young brides could see the play of the future put on for their eager eyes they would take off the veil and fold it away for another and better Fortune!

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

When the Thyroid Gland Is Below Par.

Dr. Copeland

Today I want to tell you about a condition called Hypothyroidism. You will recall that in a recent article I told about Hyperthyroidism, a disease commonly known as Goitre.

Hypothyroidism differs from hyperthyroidism in that in the former there is a deficiency in the thyroid secretions. The prefix hypo refers to a decrease and hyper to an increase.

When we speak of hyperthyroidism, then, we imply that there is an increase in the secretions of the thyroid gland. This increase usually manifests itself by enlargement of the thyroid gland, which you will recall is located in the front of the neck, adjoining the Adam's apple. There is loss of weight, rapid pulse, marked sweating and trembling of the hands. These various symptoms are thought to be due to an increase in the secretions of the thyroid gland.

In hypothyroidism we have a different picture. Persons with hypothyroidism are not really ill they simply feel below par. They know something is wrong, for they do not feel as well as they should.

Excessive weariness and fatigue following any exertion are the chief complaints, in spite of rest and vacation the weariness and fatigue return. There is a loss of the "pep" these individuals formerly possessed.

Other signs are confusing, but they must be considered. There may be underweight or overweight. It is not uncommon to observe constipation, susceptibility to cold, and infections, vague aches and pains and, at times, a general feeling of soreness in the abdomen.

This condition of hypothyroidism is often baffling and can only be accurately determined by means of a special test. By its application the doctor can determine whether our bodies are working at a slow or rapid rate. To borrow terms from our golfing friends, it will be determined whether we are below par, above par or at par.

In hyperthyroidism the score is above par. In the condition that I am talking about today, hypothyroidism, it is below par. No diagnosis of hypothyroidism can be made unless there is definitely demonstrated what the doctors call a lowered "basal metabolic rate."

Your physician will be happy to enlighten you about this fascinating and important subject. If he thinks it necessary he will advise this test for you.

These conditions of hypo- and hyperthyroidism are of particular importance for those who live in the Great Lakes Basin. In this region diseases of the thyroid gland are most common.

The disease under discussion rapidly responds to treatment, and rarely if ever requires operation. It should not be overlooked because if neglected it does damage to the body.

Dicky's Jealousy Prompts a Threat at Veritzen

I gave back Dicky's stare coolly, though my pulses were pounding. It was one thing to match my wits against Philip Veritzen's, to make him an ambiguous promise that I meant to keep in my own way, not his. It was another to explain my plan satisfactorily to my jealous, temperamental husband.

"I'm not 'letting myself in' for anything," I said.

Dicky laughed unpleasantly.

"You've virtually promised to steal those letters for him from Noel and Mary—to give the thing its short and ugly name. Beg a thousand pardons, old dear, but what else does it amount to? He forbade you to ask them for the letters."

"But I did not promise him I would refrain from asking," I said coldly. "All I promised was to do my best to get the letters for him. And I think you owe me an apology."

Dicky gave me a quizzical glance, then laughed.

"I shouldn't wonder," he said. "But, my word! your Puritan conscience must be deader than any door nail ever forged. What a petticoated Machiavelli you are! But look here, young woman! Don't you try any of that stuff on me. It's all right to pull it on old Phil, but let it stop there."

"I don't think I ever have tried to 'pull anything on' you as you so elegantly express it," I said frigidly.

"Sure, I'm the elegantest guy going," Dicky retorted imperturbably. "But, see that you heed them words, me proud beauty. And let me tell you something about that distinguished gentleman who has just left us. I've told you this before, but I'm going to warn you again for the good of your soul. You're not always going to get off as easily as you did this morning. Phil Veritzen never was noted for his self-restraint. I'm perfectly aware that he didn't kiss you this morning, you were a little too quick on the sidestep for him. Also, he saw me looming in the doorway just as you dodged. I would have knocked him for a goal or two, only that's so tremendously out of date these days. If you see a gent trying to kiss your wife, and she isn't screaming 'to you for hel-l-up,' the etiquette writers, I believe, advise you to keep calm and smile sweetly. And, I ask you, if I didn't behave like a perfect modern gent."

He did not stop for an answer, but went on while I tried to reconcile this treatment of an embarrassing episode with my preconceived ideas of how Dicky would react to any man's offering me a caress.

"But," he said, his voice suddenly stern, "don't make any mistake about this. If that old chimpanzee ever does kiss you, really, instead of just pecking at the air, and I find out about it, there won't be enough left of him to make a property pie. Mark me, I'm not warning you about your end of the performance. If I thought you needed warning, I'd do a disappearing act right now. But I'm not going to let that old guy play the heavy Lothario if I'm around, and I intend to be."

He walked toward the kitchenette, then turned and grinned at me companionably.

"Odor of coffee comes to nostrils of rampageous husband, tames him instantly," he said. "Pour me a cup, old dear. But let me tell you, this stunt of your being employed by some man who can have you at his beck and call is all wrong, I know. I promised not to kick while your contract was in duration, and I'll not open my mouth again. But—don't you ever get tired of it yourself?"

I had a sudden primitive impulse to cry an emphatic affirmative, and to assure him that I never would do another bit of work for Philip Veritzen. Then there flashed before my mental eyes the image of Edith Fairfax, poised and secure in her position as Dicky's business partner, and seizing every chance to put me at a disadvantage in the silent contest for his affection which I knew she was continually waging.

"One gets tired of everything," I said evasively. "But that does not mean that one gives up a job just because of fatigue. I can assure you, however, that there never will be any need for you to transform Mr. Veritzen into a property pie. And I promise you, now, that I will indulge in no hair-pulling contest if I see some charming woman trying to kiss you, whether she succeeds or not."

I meant Edith Fairfax and he knew it, but neither of us gave any indication of our telepathy. I also knew that I had scored heavily in my carefully apparent indifference to his being kissed by anyone. There is nothing which so flatters Dicky as to have me jealous of him.

I gave him no chance to reply, but moved swiftly into the kitchenette, poured him a cup of coffee, put in the amount of cream and sugar which I know by heart and brought it to him, together with one of Katie's little cakes.

"This is better than speculating upon what we shall do in contingencies that may never be realized," I said, smiling.

He took the coffee and sniffed it appreciatively.

"There's this to be said for you," he said with a grin. "You're the world's best coffee maker. And we'll forget the rest, all except what's going to happen to Old Phil Veritzen if he ever lands a kiss on your downy cheeks, your sea-shell ears, or your ruby lips."

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Accepting an Invitation to Join a Society

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have received a notice from a large organization that I have been elected for membership and that I should let their secretary know if I will be present at their next meeting for initiation. Will you be so kind as to inform me the correct way to write a note containing this information, as I know it will be read aloud in the meeting previous to my initiation? N.

Your note should read something like this:

My Dear Mrs. Graham:

Thank you so much for your kind notification of my election to membership in ——. I was deeply touched by this high honor and privilege . . . will you please be so kind as to tell the members of —— that I deeply appreciate this election and assure them that it will be my constant wish to live up to the fine ideals and qualities for which I know they stand?

I shall attend the meeting on January ——, as you suggest, and I am anticipating, with special pleasure, this meeting and this opportunity to greet the members of the organization.

Best wishes to you, Mrs. Graham, and to all the other members of ——.

Most sincerely yours.

Gracious Telephone Conversations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for one who has received a telephone call to say, at the end of the conversation, "Thank you for calling?"

2. What is the person who made the call to say in reply?

3. Is it correct for a young woman to say this to a young man friend who has called?

HELEN.

1. Yes, proper, thoroughly, and a most friendly and gracious thing to say. In fact, it's one of the most delightful things to say at the end of a telephone call . . . and you hear polite people say it always.

2. "It has been delightful to talk with you," or "I have had such a happy time chatting with you . . . I hope that I am to see you soon."

3. Yes, very polite.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

Some of the men who were cited for bravery in the late war and feel pretty cocky about it might read this and do a little thinking. Not all heroes go to war, and facing the firing line is at least a quicker, more exciting way of making an exit than struggling with starvation and keeping hope intact in spite of every obstacle.

A lady writes me of the courage and hope in the heart of an elderly woman in her town. She tells it better than I can, for she wrote just after visiting the soldier in question. She says:

"It is strange how many dear old souls face the difficulties of life without a murmur, even when starvation faces them. Just to let some folks know how brave it is to trust God I wish you would print this letter. She is 60, a dear soul and as jolly as a girl of 16. She has lived in the same place for 48 years, since 1882, cared for and helped her old folks all her life. Her father died 10 years ago and her stepmother three years ago.

"Instead of deeding her the old homestead the mother deeded it half to a niece and half to her. The niece demanded her share at once, though she had never helped the old folks. The daughter took a mortgage of $600 to pay the niece so she could save the home. The mortgage comes due, and the dear old soul has no way to meet it. She lives on $10 a month rent she gets for half of the house and she can't even pay the taxes this winter.

"I asked her why she didn't call on the town for help and she answered: 'Oh no! I have only one friend in time of need and it's God. He never fails me. If they foreclose the mortgage and I have to go to work for someone I shall still be happy and thank God for my health.'

"Some of these women who think their life is hard should have her troubles. Her husband had a paralytic stroke six years ago and is unable to work so she has him to care for too. When I talked with her they had exactly one dollar and a few cents in the house. Their coal almost gone, but she seemed the happiest soul I ever met."

You're right. She is marvelous and I wish I knew her and could help her. But, remember that God helps those who help themselves and after all it might be wiser for her to talk to the charities and get some advice on how to proceed before the mortgage is foreclosed. Afterward it won't do much good. Don't you think so? Being that happy in the face of her troubles is a gift. You've got to be born with certain qualities and exercise them all your life. She's one in a billion. God bless her and help her. But I wish you would advise her to get some sound advice and help before her home is gone.

That's just the advice of a pessimist to an optimist. If I'm wrong, write me care Universal Service, 63 Park Row, New York City.

Household Hints

Place camphor gum in the drawer with your silver and it will keep the silver from tarnishing.

Boil the clothesline for half an hour in salt water and it will keep it from tangling, and the clothes will not freeze to it.

Rust can be removed from steel by rubbing the metal with linseed oil and letting it soak for a few days. Wipe off and polish with powdered, unslacked lime until the rust is loosened.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Runover heels throw a strain on the muscles of the ankle. They incline toes to point inward and have a bad effect upon posture. The shoe of ample dimensions is not only more comfortable, but it is an economical investment. It holds its shape and gives longer service. Stockings too short wear out quickly and are the direct cause of callouses and corns on little toes.

No use beckoning beauty woes to come along and settle on one's celestial face. That's what the woman does who neglects the daily beauty routine, which takes little time, but which means a lot if one is to put up a brave fight against the afflictions of old whiskered Time. At least once a day complexion and hands should be anointed with a soothing oil. Once a day, the beauty supplicant should take 50 deep breaths, lift upon her toes 30 times, touch the floor with her fingers without bending her knees 20 times. Go to it, woman!

Lanoline, rubbed into the breasts every night, may help development. Massage must be gentle; glands are easily injured. Spraying with cold water every morning acts as a tonic and developer. Alcohol rubs, breathing exercises, calesthenics that pull on chest and arm muscles are recommennded.

Speaking of permanent waves, the hard-boiled coiffure appears at its best when it is freshly shampooed. And properly shampooed. Soap scum left on the hair takes the spirit out of the machine-made undulation. It goes limp, looks glum and there is no health in it. The permanent thrives under petting. It loves hot water and enjoys a light spraying of brilliantine now and then. The hair has taken on the qualities of naturally curly hair, which also must be coddled and fussed with, moistened, combed, pressed with the finger into an attractive design.

Stout women who want to lose fat should get a package of KRUSCHEN SALTS from any leading druggist anywhere in America. (Lasts 4 weeks). If this first bottle doesn't convince you this is the easiest, safest and surest way to lose fat—if you don't feel a superb improvement in health, so gloriously energetic, vigorously alive—your money is gladly returned.

Note: When taking Kruschen for overweight you can reduce more quickly by cutting out pastry and fatty meats, go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

In just one week Mrs. M. C. Taylor of Leesburg, W. Va., reduced her weight from 175 to 154½ pounds. Her headache is no more and shortness of breath is gone. "Thanks for such a good remedy," she writes.

Horoscopes

Sunday, January 25

Sunday's horoscope holds promise of unusual liveliness in domestic, social, cultural or affectional "matters rather than in week-day activities. These latter are under baneful ray, and should be postponed until more propitious planetary sway. There may be some sudden visitation, not quite desirable.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which their personal affairs may thrive and bring compensations, but business conditions are under a sign of adversity, setback and possible disruption. A sudden and disintegrating visitation is possible, finances are hazardous, and disappointments and delays are among the probabilities. Also beware treachery and subtlety.

A child born on this day should be gracious, socially accomplished and popular, but it may encounter many sudden difficulties in life, with many obstacles to surmount.

Monday, January 26

Monday's astrological forecast is under the strong influence of the mysterious and marvelous Neptune, both by solar and lunar aspect. This configuration effects peculiar and chaotic situations, difficult of a secret or strategic nature and encourages negotiations with secret societies, large corporations or combines and affairs of intrigue or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of the peculiar, unfathomable and intriguing. Their affairs will prosper through secret agreements or conspiracy, and negotiations with large corporations, mergers and secret bodies should thrive. New projects in this connection should flourish.

A child born on this day may be eccentric, peculiar, given to mysterious and secret activities. It may do well in strategic positions or with mergers, "rings," secret bodies or diplomacy.

Pershing Insisted Americans Fight Aggressive War

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

BY JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER XIII

The most important question that confronted us in the preparation of the forces to produce soldiers of efficient service was training. Except for the Spanish-American War, nearly 20 years before, actual combat experience of the Regular Army had been limited to the independent action of minor commands in the Philippines and to two expeditions into Mexico, each with forces smaller than a modern American division.

The World War involved the handling of masses where even a division was relatively a new unit. It was one thing to call one or two million men to the colors, and quite another thing to transform them into well-organized, instructed army capable of meeting and holding its own in battle against the best trained troops in Europe with their years' actual war experience to its credit.

Few people realized what it was going to involve at a number stupendous, undertaking to [illegible] teach these vast numbers [illegible] We [illegible] difficulty, however, [illegible] soldiers, [illegible] these Allied instructors [illegible] what [illegible] that the French and to a large [illegible] the British had practically [illegible] of them were [illegible] and down to the conviction that [illegible] developments since 1914 had [illegible] the principles of warfare [illegible] had not changed, and that [illegible] had been [illegible] in accordance with these principles.

Gen. Pershing

These officers had to learn the interior economy of feeding, housing and caring for their men and how to lead them in battle. This great task was, of course, under the direction of the War Department.

A general scheme of schools for the A. E. F. was prepared by the operations and training section but in order that this instruction should be as complete and uniform as possible and at the same time be co-ordinated with other activities, I decided that training should be handled by officers who could devote their entire time to it.

Allies' System Differ

An additional section of the Headquarters General Staff was therefore established, called the training section, to function under my personal direction. As chief of this section Col. Paul B. Malone was chosen with Col. H. B. Fiske as his assistant.

In the preparation of courses of training an especial study had been made not only of the basic principles taught by the Allies, but also of the methods employed to give them practical application. The British and French were not entirely in accord in their ideas of organization or of battle tactics, and sought to impress us with the superiority of their respective systems.

Our officers engaged in this duty were directed to keep in view the development of the most efficient fighting machine as quickly as possible, and as a means to this end to adopt only sound doctrines of training and make them essentially our own.

The British methods of teaching trench warfare appealed to me very strongly. They taught their men to be aggressive and undertook to perfect them in hand-to-hand fighting with bayonet, grenade and dagger. A certain amount of this kind of training was necessary to stimulate the morale of troops by giving them confidence in their own personal prowess.

Through the kindness of Sir Douglas Haig, we were fortunate early in our experience to have assigned to us Lieut. Gen. R. H. K. Butler and other officers of the British Army to assist in this individual training. Later on several French and British officers

KNOCK THAT COLD IN A JIFFY

Here's Relief Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiff, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean aching pains in head and body begin to go, the cold breaks up, poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

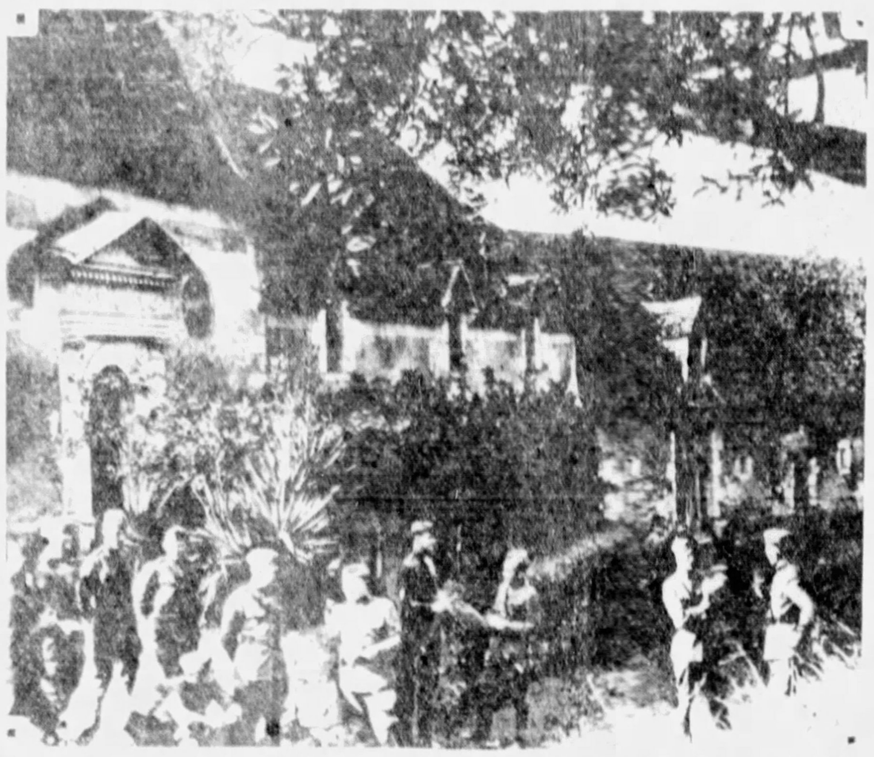
AMERICAN OFFICERS IN TRAINING



U. S. ARMY OFFICERS IN TRAINING AT AN A. E. F. SCHOOL ESTABLISHED IN FRANCE

Open Warfare Necessary

It was perhaps logical to expect that the French should take this view as nations unlike the Germans they had been on the defensive at least in thought during the past half century. It is true that on occasions the French assumed the offensive but it was to further the defensive idea.

In the situation that followed the first battle of the Marne, the two great armies on the Western Front were entrenched against each other and neither had been able to make more than local gains. The long period during which the condition prevailed and its psychological effect, together with the natural leaning of the French toward the defensive, to which should be added the adverse effect of their recent spring experience, had apparently combined to obscure the principle of the open offensive.

If the French doctrine had prevailed our instruction would have been limited to a brief period of training for trench fighting. A new army brought up entirely on such principles would have been seriously handicapped without the protection of the trenches. It would probably have lacked the aggressiveness to break through the enemy's lines and the knowledge of how to carry on thereafter.

It was evident that the victory could not be won by the costly process of attrition, but that we should have to drive the enemy out into the open and engage him in a war of movement. Instruction in open warfare was based upon individual and group initiative, resourcefulness and tactical judgment, which were of equal advantage in trench warfare.

Training Program Issued

Therefore we took decided issue with the Allies, and, without neglecting thorough preparations for trench warfare, undertook to train mainly for open warfare, with the object from the start of vigorously forcing the offensive.

Our units then in training were nearly all recruits, and many of the officers and noncommissioned officers were easily influenced by the ideas of the French designated to assist us. To avoid the effect of their teaching it became necessary later to take over and direct all instructions ourselves. For the purpose of impressing our own doctrine upon officers a training program was issued which laid great stress on open warfare and offensive action, the following being a pertinent extract on this point:

"The above methods to be employed must remain and become distinctly our own. All instruction must contemplate the assumption of a vigorous offensive. This purpose will be emphasized in every phase of training until it becomes a settled habit of thought."

Intimately connected with the question of training for open warfare was the matter of rifle practice. The earliest of my cablegrams on this subject was in August, in which it was urged that thorough instruction in rifle practice should be carried on at home because of the difficulty of giving it in France.

"Study here shows value and desirability of retaining our existing small arms target practice course. In view of great difficulty in securing ranges in France due to density of the population and cultivation recommend as far as practicable the complete course be given in the United States before troops embark. Special emphasis should be placed on rapid fire."

Rifles Neglected

The armies on the Western Front in the recent battles that I had witnessed had all but discarded the rifle as a shooting weapon. Machine guns, grenades, trench mortars and one-pounders had become the main reliance of the average allied soldier. These were all valuable weapons for specific purposes, but they could not replace the combination of an efficient soldier and his rifle.

Numerous instances were reported in the allied armies where [illegible] an [illegible] had [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Jim Admits That He Lied About Being Robbed

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLII.

Jim Tracy's face now was drawn and strained.

"If you lay a hand on me I'll smash you!" he said between his teeth.

Carson stood quite still now, alertness pervading his whole light body.

"Don't make a fool of yourself, or you'll most certainly get the worst of it," he said. "Are you going to hand over your wallet or am I going to take it out of your pocket?"

Now pressed—back of all Jim Tracy—could doubt that Garson meant what he said. Tracy, despite his angry resentment, knew full well that Garson could handle him, as he did the men were not a great deal different in size but Garson's nervous energy or force behind it was immeasurable.

Produces Wallet

For just a second Tracy hesitated, then with a sweep he stepped back and extracted from an inside pocket of his coat the wallet and tossed it on the table contemptuously.

"All right, there you are," he said, acidly. "What are you going to do about it?"

"That's all we just wanted to see it," Garson stated. "Put it back in your pocket now if you like. I think that proves you lied about the holdup, doesn't it?"

Tracy restored the wallet to his pocket. "It must be great to be as wise as you are, Garson. Since you know so much, perhaps you can tell Connie and Kitty why it was I wanted to stay in the house last night. I admit my story was all hokum, but I framed it up because I wanted to have a reasonable excuse to come back. Maybe you'd like to know why?"

"I would very much," Garson [illegible]

"But the [illegible] had to do [illegible] Connie. [illegible] Kitty [illegible] I had a good reason. And the reason was Garson himself. Furthermore, if he stays in this house tonight, I stay, too. Do you think I'd leave you two girls alone under the same roof with this fellow? For all you know, he might loot the place."

"Mr. Garson's as square as a die, dear," Connie said.

Garson was silent, his face set. True, he might have knocked Jim Tracy down, but that would have achieved nothing. No easy response came to his lips to deny the sneering accusation. Yet even Tracy himself, unbalanced as he was by humor, sensed he had gone too far.

Connie Angered

"I'm not trying to get you, Garson," he said, his voice half apologetic. "For all I know, you might be the best fellow in the world; but you must admit your record is against you. I happen to remember that Connie told me when you talked to her in Kitty's behalf your demands amounted practically to blackmail. Probably you can't understand the sort of responsibility I feel toward Connie and her mother. They haven't had any men in the family for the last couple of years and I've been a sort of son and a brother. That's all there's to it. You forced me to tell you why I stayed here and I'm sorry if I have hurt your feelings. Perhaps it was a foolish reason, but I did what I thought was best."

"It's too bad your best wasn't sufficient to stop the theft of Mrs. Calvert's pearls," Garson remarked, icily.

Connie's heart went out swiftly to Duke Garson; now more than ever the man stirred her. It was cruel, unfair to taunt him ... to bait him ...

"I don't know that your responsibility is sufficient to excuse you for insulting a guest in my house," Connie told Tracy, coldly. "If you feel any responsibility toward me or mother, I tell you it's canceled right now."

Jim Apologizes

"Well, of course, I'm sorry, Connie," Tracy protested.

"Oh, Jim, you have made a terrible mistake," Kitty said hopelessly. "I've known Duke for years. I could have told you that he was a wonderful character. I knew you didn't understand him, dear, but you shouldn't have made such an awful mistake."

"If I made a mistake it was an honest mistake," Tracy said softly. "I only claim credit for good intentions, even if I did go wrong for it. If Garson had let me alone I wouldn't have said things he forced me to."

"More likely it's the liquor you've been drinking that put unchristian ideas into your mind," Connie told him severely. "You certainly owe Mr. Garson an apology."

"If you say I do, Connie, I'll apologize," Tracy told her, a sort of forced earnestness in his voice. "Garson, I'm sorry for what I said. You know, Connie, I wouldn't do a thing to hurt you, or Kitty, for anything on earth. You're both the dearest girls on earth to me, and I always felt as welcome as I would in my own house, and I thought I showed it."

"If I am interrupting that home-like confidence perhaps I had better withdraw from this place," Garson said, a trifle softly. "I'm sure Connie—Miss Calvert—wouldn't want the bond broken by a stranger."

"No, no! This is all so terrible, Mr. Garson, that I don't know what to say—but I don't want you to go. Not now. Jim is an old friend and he simply forgot himself and slipped out of bound. He apologized, and I apologize, too, for him. You have been perfectly wonderful to me and to Kitty, and I know that we'd both be perfectly miserable if you went away now in anger."

Before she realized it she was standing before Kitty and Jim—so close to Garson that his arm was on her shoulder protecting her. Suddenly tears came in a flood to her eyes and she rested her head on his shoulder.

DAILY TRUE STORY — Love Birds

As Mrs. Haynes placed the dish of porterhouse steak and sauted mushrooms on the supper table she caught sight of her daughter-in-law before the living room mirror. She paused to observe Carolyn because she had become very fond of her. The younger woman wore an affected, lively expression while her lips moved silently as if she were reciting. Every now and then she consulted tiny notes held in the palm of her hand.

Mrs. Haynes shook her head, smiling a little grimly. In the six years that Carolyn and Jim had been living with her, the girl had been getting deeper and deeper into clubs and affectedness and further and further away from the kitchen. And poor Jim was sinking deeper and deeper into inertia with occasional spurts at home-making.

"Carolyn," suggested her mother-in-law casually, "would you mind putting the finishing touches to the salad, the cheese, you know. You can do it so well."

The lovely brows drew together. "Can't you see, mother, I'm trying to put the finishing touches on my speech for tomorrow afternoon?"

Carolyn turned a withering glance toward the elder woman. Mrs. Haynes gently withdrew to the kitchen. Her thoughts, however, roted back over the years to the day when Jim, apologetically, had asked if he might bring his new wife to live with her just for a few weeks until they could find a house they liked. With something of a prophet's vision, she had hesitated at first, but had let them come. The weeks had lengthened to puzzled months and the months to troubled years.

Pathetic Scene

Jim had come in beaming, as usual, just when the coffee finished perking. How carefully she planned their meals, watching the clock to see that the biscuits remained in the oven at a certain temperature for a certain number of minutes, making home-made dressing for the salads because Carolyn couldn't eat the store kind, never serving pork because it disagreed with Carolyn's "weak stomach." Carolyn, however, in spite of her weak stomach, had gained 24 pounds since she had married.

From the dining room Mrs. Haynes saw her son framed in the doorway, caught the swift little gesture of negation from Carolyn, and saw a depressed look wipe out his usual good-natured expression.

"Goodness, I'm a most nervous wreck," her daughter-in-law complained as she mechanically kissed Jim seated at the table.

After supper Jim settled himself with the evening paper, while Carolyn eased herself luxuriously into the most comfortable chair and lamented. "I'm sorry, Mother, I don't feel equal to helping with the dishes. Just stack them in the sink."

Mrs. Haynes murmured it was quite all right and proceeded to do the dishes with dispatch.

"Gosh," she heard Jim exclaim as she set the breakfast table with Carolyn's favorite yellow dishes, "here's a peach of a house. See, mother?"

Something tightened in Mrs. Haynes' throat. It was so pathetic to hear Jim rave like a boy about a house and try to persuade Carolyn to go look at it. Only Carolyn never was interested. Jim's mother walked over to see the picture.

"Sun parlors are for birds and I hate birds," intoned Carolyn lazily, pulling a magazine at random from the nearby rack.

Neglects Supper

"It's a very nice house," advanced Mrs. Haynes as she moved away. She had to be so careful not to take sides. Jim took out pencil and paper and, like a boy with a drawing book, began to make lines. His mother knew that all the garden sections of the magazines were smeared and thumbed by Jim, while the love stories were pored over by the girl.

Poor Jim wanted to lead a normal life and assume a man's responsibilities, yet could not because he was hampered by a wife like Carolyn, Mrs. Haynes thought rebelliously. She straightened the grapefruit spoon. Carolyn had become a parasite. Something just had to be done or soon Carolyn would be past helping. Maybe its was too late now. No, she refused to believe that.

In the living room, darning Jim's socks, which Carolyn refused to darn, Mrs. Haynes worried. She had tried leaving Jim and Carolyn in the house alone, but discovered upon her return that they had gone out to all meals and the house was full of dust.

Jim and Carolyn, though she was devoted to them, just had to get out of her house for their own good. She had made it too comfortable for them. Jim seemed unable to solve the situation because he was so deeply in love with Carolyn.

The darning lay beneath her idle hands while she puzzled. Finally, just as Jim began his nightly game of solitaire, Mrs. Haynes had an idea so startling it nearly made her jump out of her chair. She stole a look at Carolyn to see if she had noticed. Eyes starring, she snatched up the unfinished sock and began to weave in and out.

The next evening when Jim came home, the coffee wasn't perking, Mrs. Haynes hadn't even lighted the stove. Jim's face was so naively shocked over this unprecedented fact that his mother, glancing up at him from where she was wrapping a cover over a bird cage, inwardly smiled.

"I had no idea it was so late. I was so busy caring for Margie's birds."

"Did she land them on you?" inquired Jim belligerently.

"Well, I don't mind at all. You know I really like birds. She has more than she knows what to do with."

She tied the gay cover securely then hastily lighted the gas.

The supper was a hurried up affair. The salad was thrown together, the biscuits scorched. Mrs. Haynes apologized, her face innocent, but both Carolyn and Jim were plainly annoyed.

"I should think, mother," suggested Carolyn, "you'd have your hands full without taking in birds."

"But they brighten up the kitchen considerably," Mrs. Haynes answered, her hands folded gently in her lap.

"But the way they sing!" she complained.

The birds did sing. They began at 6 in the morning and sang the entire day through, swelling their little yellow throats until they nearly burst. All because of Mrs. Haynes' meticulous care. And how Carolyn complained that they nearly drove her crazy.

The meals, which for six years had been served by the clock, now became gradually hashed up affairs. Often the meat was tough or the rolls were soggy. After a particularly unsavory supper one night Jim pounced upon the weekly house design.

Plan Works

Carolyn jumped up. "Let me see it."

Mrs. Haynes' heart missed a beat. Could it be possibly true that Carolyn was taking interest. Yes, together they studied the plans, the location, the price. They lowered their voices. Mrs. Haynes prayed.

"Mother," confided Carolyn the next morning, "Jim and I have decided to buy a house. We've always had that in mind you know, Jim—well Jim hated to ..."

There was a pause.

"Yes, Carolyn," helped Mrs. Haynes, "I shall miss you terribly, but I'm so glad about the house. Sit down and tell me all about it. The closets, are they deep, and how about the cellar?"

Mrs. Hayne's pulses were racing.

The day after Jim and Carolyn moved into their very own home, Mrs. Haynes tied all the covers a bit reluctantly over the four bird cages and returned them to her sister, Margie. Smiling, she penned the following note: "Thanks for the use of your birds. They actually sang Carolyn into a home of her own."

WITH HIS TEE-PEE IN DARKEST AFRICA

By HORACE WALPOLE FRISBY

Congressman-at-Large.

My little band of faithful followers who have been reading my African memoirs will doubtless be anxious to look over my scrap book. Naturally it was difficult to take pictures in Darkest Africa of (a) the darkness and (b) the fact that wild animals are always rooting about, upsetting tripod and photographer. I was particularly anxious to get good shots of the native types, or "whoopie girls," as they are called. But to get the pictures I had to have the girls put white powder on their faces—as otherwise a black face in darkest Africa would merely get an effect like this—

However, by trial and error, I succeeded in obtaining the large picture above which Mrs. Frisby recently came across in my vest pocket. I promised her I would write these lines to prove that the picture was merely a scientific study—and not what her snap judgment suggested. The picture shows me explaining to the kiddie that the world is round. Note the egg.

Pinchot's Pledge Demand

Governor's Requirement That Appointees Promise Loyalty Is of Doubtful Value—Comment on Local News.

Gov. Pinchot's announcement that all applicants for positions will be required, in addition to taking the usual oath of office, to sign a pledge to defend the Constitution and support his policies is not likely to arouse enthusiasm, even among the Governor's friends. The pledge is of doubtful value. It implies suspicion that the oath of office is not sufficient, and probably will cause resentment.

The vote by which the Philadelphia City Council adopted a resolution for modification of the Blue Law was impressive. By a majority of 17 to 2 the councilmen recommended the enactment of legislation to permit sports and other innocent recreations now forbidden on Sunday. Now if the Pittsburgh Council will come through with an equally strong recommendation the way will be made easier for the friends of Blue Law reform in the Legislature.

Burning coal mines are not a rarity; so it would be supposed that effective methods for dealing with them would have been discovered. Council is considering plans for extinguishing the fire in a mine that extends under Crafton—a fire that is believed to be endangering property. There is some talk of spending several thousand dollars on an experimental plan. It is to be presumed that before the taxpayers' money is thus expended the Bureau of Mines and other authorities will be consulted and their views obtained as to what should be done.

Congratulations are due the 22 boys who became Eagle Scouts at the annual meeting of Allegheny County Council, Boy Scouts of America. To win a merit badge is no paltry achievement. It calls for work and intelligence. To win enough merit badges to qualify for the Eagle badge is an accomplishment to be proud of. There is a well rounded education in the studies and activities that must be pursued in attaining the distinction of being an Eagle Scout.

Dr. Charles Reitell, of the University of Pitts- burgh, whom Gov. Pinchot has appointed as director of the Greater Pennsylvania Commission, knows the State and its needs from his work as a fish commissioner and in other public offices. He attracts attention by the enthusiasm that he puts into his activities. Under his leadership the Greater Pennsylvania Commission no doubt will increase the citizens' pride in being Pennsylvanians.

Daring in a good cause may be praiseworthy, but the daring of the small boys who risk their lives by stealing rides on the outside of street cars should be discouraged. A traffic policeman employed by the Pittsburgh Railways Company arrested 190 lads for stealing rides last year, and still the evil continues. It might be well for all parents of lively youngsters to question them on this subject, and, if the boys confess to stealing rides, to give them some good advice.

The Young Women's Christian Association is in the midst of its annual campaign for funds. It needs $140,000. There is a special reason why the money should be forthcoming promptly this year. The Y. W. C. A. is being called upon for service just now to a greater extent than at any other time in its history except during the war. It is doing a great deal to help unemployed girls.

The suggestion has been made in these columns more than once, in commenting on holdups, that it might prove of considerable service to Pittsburgh policemen to be "quick on the draw." The lesson has not been lost on at least one officer, employed in guarding a bank; for he carries his pistol, not in its holster but in his right hand coat pocket, with his fingers almost constantly on the handle. In the unlikely event that an attempt is ever made to hold up that bank someone is going to be shot.

It has seemed on several occasions recently that the limit in impudence had been reached by the criminals operating in these parts. But the alleged moonshiners who took possession of a hunting lodge in Cambria County and drove away the lawful tenants at the point of rifles take the cake. That is about the last word in "gall."

The Chamber of Commerce is properly indignant over the failure of the police bureau to enforce the ordinance against begging on the streets. If there were no other way for needy persons to obtain help, the begging, of course, would be excusable. But inasmuch as the Helping Hand Committee, as is well known, is willing to furnish food and lodging to all applicants at its headquarters, 439 Water street, there is no justification for allowing mendicants to ply their trade.

It is gratifying to note that Council is expediting the project for turning part of Carnegie Lake, in Highland Park, into a large swimming pool. The Public Works Committee has approved an appropriation of $50,000 to erect a bathhouse and do other work in connection with the plan, and favorable action on the recommendation is expected at the Council meeting Monday. The swimming pool, which probably will be completed by next May, will furnish wholesome recreation to many thousands of Pittsburghers.

The sentence imposed on a hit-and-run driver in Criminal Court by Judge George V. Moore serves as warning that motorists who fail to stop after striking anyone with their cars are seriously aggravating their offense. The culprit in this case pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter and was sentenced to serve 15 months in the workhouse. Such a sentence is calculated to make careless autoists thoughtful.

Mayor Russell Wilson, of Cincinnati, paid Pitts- burgh a pretty compliment in his address before the Traffic and Transportation Association. It is a "trade last" which we can sincerely reciprocate. Cincinnati, he said, looks up to Pittsburgh as an industrial and cultural center. We may well look up to Cincinnati for its elimination of factionalism in the city government and the removal of its civil service from politics.

For several years Pittsburgh, which formerly en- joyed regular annual seasons of grand opera, has had only occasional sporadic performances. Now we are to have another brief season by a first-class company. If attendance at the performances of the Chicago Civic Opera Company in Pittsburgh next month warrants it, the company will be booked for another season. It seems unquestionable that Pittsburgh has sufficient opera lovers to support a few nights of opera each year. It will be a reflection on the city if high-class performances fail to draw good-sized audiences.

A he-man is one who never refers to himself as a "he-man."

* * *

* * *

There are three secrets which even the most voluble and indiscreet woman never tells: the date of her birth, the story of the man who "got away" and her real opinion of the man she loves.

Perhaps the reason why mystery stories, mystery plays and guessing contests are becoming more and more popular with men is because there is so little mystery about the modern women to keep their imaginations working.

* * *

A woman always visions her husband's old loves as a succession of fascinating houris; a man always thinks of his wife's old lovers as a string of "also-rans" against whom he won out.

* * *

A woman gives herself to the man of her choice, but no man ever seems to feel that he has more than loaned himself to any woman, these days.

* * *

For the protection of husbands, widow's weeds should be made less becoming. Even a devoted wife can't help wondering, tentatively, how she would look in the fascinating new mourning veils and bonnets.

A failure is often a man who has squandered all his time and money in trying to prove that he was a "success" with the women.

* * *

The modern girl may not know much about Greek or Latin, but she can say "Yes" in almost any language.

* * *

There are all sorts of "deserting" husbands—including the one who stays at home and looks after the car and the pekingese, while his wife goes to Reno.

Isn't It So?

The only thing wrong with any country is the people.

It is a wise hotel that knows all activities of its bellboys.

Only unmarried women have optimistic views of wedded bliss.

One way to meet the best people is to decide not to shave this morning.

Just because we should love our enemies is no reason why we should be sore at our friends.

Malthus, Population Prophet

By Archibald Henderson

Malthus and his theories have provoked an almost incalculable amount of discussion and controversy. He has been the center of attack for many views he did not uphold; and the general result of his theory of population and food increase has been the stimulation of very wide research in the fields he opened up for investigation.

It is only within comparatively recent years that the value of his work has been fully recognized, even although it has not always been supported by the subsequent results of research in that field.

Malthus was by no means the first person to study and discuss the future of mankind, on the basis of population growth and food increase. These ideas were considered by both Plato and Aristotle, and in modern times, Benjamin Franklin and David Hume anticipated Malthus in certain of his views. Even down to the time of the English statesman, Pitt, increase in population was regarded as an unqualified advantage for a state.

Malthus sharply indicated the difficulties and pointed out certain of the remedies, for unrestricted population growth. Extended study of these problems is now an accepted phase of contemporary social research.

Thomas Robert Malthus was born near Dorking, England, February 17, 1766. After receiving adequate preparation he entered Cambridge, whence he was graduated in 1788, having served as a fellow of Jesus College. While still retaining his fellowship, he took orders and was appointd to a parish in his native county.

Ten years after his graduation, there appeared anonymously the first edition of his great work, "An Essay on the Principles of Population As It Affects the Future Improvement of Society." At this time, Malthus was only 32 years old. It is commonly accepted as true that this epochal work was suggested by an article in William Godwin's Enquirer.

Although Godwin was a Socialist, of a sort, and disciple of Rousseau, the views of the perfectibility of human society were not entertained by Malthus, who held a scientific point of view. Malthus, however, was violently attacked and abused, for principles which were contrary to his own.

After making extended studies in Switzerland, France and Norway, and completely revising his first work, he was elected professor of modern history and political economy in the East India Company's College at Haileybury, a position he held until his death.

The fundamental formula of Malthus is that population increases in a geometrical ratio, food in an arithmetical ratio. This formula has been rejected by present-day economists. But the subject of population growth, stimulated by Malthus, has enabled predictions now to be made with remarkable accuracy.

For example, Francis Bonynge in 1852 predicted the population of the United States 50 years ahead, decade by decade, within an error of 5 per cent. Today Edward M. East, of Harvard, does not hesitate to predict that the population of the world will be doubled by the year 2100, and that by 2500 the population will be about 35,000,000,000.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"Yes, the two babies are doing fine," says proud Dad Jones. "Nothing like youngsters. Alice and I would like a dozen of them. But we've decided not to have any more. 'Tisn't right to bring a child into the world unless you can do your duty by it. And it's going to take every nickle we can scrape together to send these two through college some day—"

Heard that argument, haven't you? Probably you're making it yourself. If so, Dr. Samuel Smith Drury may give you pause. Dr. Drury is a school teacher—the rector of St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H. And he does not think college educations are necessary or even advisable for all young people.

Moreover, he believes that our practice of letting young people dawdle away the years from 18 to 22 in college, is a wicked waste of time and man power.

Says he in his annual report—Let a father ask his boy—"Do you want to invest four years of your life while I invest $10,000 of family money in this venture?" Let them not assume that a boy whose father can afford it should go to college, regardless of profiting the boy.

"Not over 75 per cent of each graduating class here, for example, can show either the intellectual fiber or the vocational urge to justify higher education . . . colleges are full, not because youth loves learning, but because society loves college, and has for the years between 18 and 22 little to offer.

"When someone is brave enough to found a society for the prevention of going to college, its membership will be snapped up by schoolmasters who know youth best and who value it most sympathetically."

Thinking of sending little Willie to college 10 years from now? Study those remarks by a man whose business is college. Study, also, the average grad who has gone through college on Dad's money.

At 18, he, or she, is a bright, alert, likable kid. Chief interests—football and dates. They "don't know what they want to be." They have no particular talent nor reason for going to college. They're going "because everybody goes."

At 19, he or she, is still a bright, alert, likable kid. Chief interests—football and dates.

At 20, he or she, is—ditto.

At 21—ditto again.

At 22, when you and I were having our second babies and buying the house on installments, those youngsters are entering life. Of what life means, in responsibility, in punishment and in pressure, they have no more idea than a blind pup. For the four most important years of youth they've Gotten By on their charm, their quickness, their "line," their collegiate sophistication. And both they, and most of the learned professors, who have taught them, have been walled from reality by the rah-rah life of the campus.

What does their B. A. degree stand for?

It stands for Bah!

Four years devoted to Bah!

Does it pay?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Her Life

When one life glows with fire divine
It is a candle on a shrine,
And all who pass the holy place
Gain something of its love and grace.
Its light is clear and who can say
How far the valiant beams may stray?

Who knows how many there may be,
By chance, this matchless gleam to see?
And who in all the world can tell
What depths of dark it may dispel
As, falling where joy's forces wane,
It brings the ray of hope again?

This is her life, so brave, so bright,
A candle that defies the night,
And flings its questing beams afar . . .
A candle that outshines a star!

Another Commission, Out of Commission

(This editorial is reprinted from Paul Block's newspapers of January 22.)

The Wickersham Commission's report on prohibition leaves the problem and the admitted evils attendant to it just as they are now.

The fact-finding Commission appointed by the President has found plenty of facts and has presented them graphically to show that prohibition has been a failure.

It has noted the serious effect of the law on the attitude of "children and employes" towards law observance. It has observed with concern the "effect on youth of the making of liquor in homes," and the "effect on working people of the conspicuous newly acquired wealth of their neighbors who have been engaged in bootlegging."

It has, it is true, found benefits from the closing of saloons, but the Commission has also found that the speakeasies have a demoralizing effect upon regard of law and order generally. And the Commission adds:

"It is a serious impairment of the legal order to have a national law upon the books theoretically governing the whole land which public opinion in many important centers will not enforce, and in many others will not suffer to be enforced effectively."

The Wickersham Commission finds these facts and reaches these conclusions, but as a unit it does not offer any constructive proposal for the eradication of these evils.

In one breath, the Commission asserts that a law can be enforced only when it reflects public opinion, and in the next breath it proposes legislation which it knows this public opinion will flout.

And although 10 of the 11 members of the Commission signed the main report, which includes the statement, "The Commission is opposed to the proposal to modify the National Prohibition Act so as to permit manufacture and sale of light wines or beer," nevertheless in this same main report the same 10 members agree on the following:

"Some of the Commission are not convinced that prohibition under the Eighteenth Amendment is unenforceable and believe that a further trial should be made with the help of the recommended improvements, and that if after such trial effective enforcement is not secured, there should be a revision of the amendment. Others of the Commission are convinced that it has been demonstrated that prohibition under the Eighteenth Amendment is unenforceable and that the amendment should be immediately revised, but recognizing that the process of amendment will require some time, they unite in the recommendations of conclusion No. 9 for the improvement of the enforcement agencies."

And although 10 of the Commission signed the main report from which the above is quoted, individually they write in an entirely different vein. One of these 10 and the eleventh, who did not sign the main report, favor entire repeal of the present law. Six others recommended the consideration by Congress of a proposal for liquor control, based on the Swedish system. Actually this means that eight of the 11 believe a change in the law is needed, although one member signed both the report favoring the Swedish system, and the recommendation for further trial of the present law.

However, President Hoover, who appointed this Commission and who, it was believed by the general public, would accept the recommendation of his own appointees, differs sharply on any revision whatsoever, even in the distant future.

And so the present Volstead law will go on and on—and the bootlegger and the racketeer and the crooked political machines and the "bought and paid-for" judges, and the minor officials will continue to prosper at the expense of the citizens of our country, unless Congress overrides the President's recommendation and takes a sensible stand for a law that can be observed—which Congress probably will not do.

Oh, America, where is thy leader?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—I don't know what happened, but I awakened with an electric start. And for what seemed an age remained tense, peering into the blackness. My scalp stretched to the tautness of a snare drum's head. Somewhere in the void was a presence!

As a sheer bluff I whispered hoarsely to my wife: "Hand me the revolver!" And she spoiled everything by drawling sleepily: "What revolver? Go to sleep." Any second I expected a couple of hairy paws to reach out, grasp my throat and throttle the daylights out of me. I choke so easily.

Anyone with my kind of an Adam's Apple does. The wildest thoughts raced through my head. Why was I always smart cracking about the cowardice of gunmen? . . . Headline: "Writer Yells for Help and Drops Dead!" . . . Maybe if I tell him I lost it all in the market he will be reasonable. . . .

The while my wife breathed softly in the throes of gentle sleep. She would be sorry when aroused by a thunderous blooey, blooey, and find me all crumpled up in the hall, pistoled smack through the head! A curtain fluttered in the bathroom.

There, I thought, is his confederate climbing in. That would be two of them now. And here I am with a wife sound asleep and a deaf dog that has to be awakened by a rough shake. Wasn't I a sucker to leave the Ritz with a night watchman on each floor? Park avenue, my eye!

It is odd how inconsequential yet comforting fancies come to one in moments of utter despair. I was strangely solaced by the fact that my watch was at a repair shop and two men couldn't carry out the piano. Maybe I could cry them out of the cigaret case Paul Whiteman gave me.

Another window curtain fluttered in the hall. Heavens, that would be three! Probably there were already one or two waiting in closets. It occurred to me I remembered seeing the lid on a wicker clothes basket move earlier in the evening. That would be still another!

* * *

Wouldn't it be funny if the clothes basket one was found suffocated? Likely it was hysteria but I almost chuckled. All the dogs smelly cast off blankets were in there. Also other discarded and perhaps fragrant what nots.

* * *

But what to do! Cautiously I raised myself to a sitting position, slowly reached out my hand toward the night table, snapped on the light and squeaked in a surprising falsetto: "What are you doing there?" My wife sat up blinking to inquire: "In Heaven's name what now? Are you losing your mind?" I put my fingers to my lips and shook my head fiercely. Instead of screaming she continued: "You look like a chunk of white chalk!" And just about then the deaf dog aroused by the flare of light, stretched, hopped out of his basket and onto the bed with a rubber ball in his mouth. With a house full of burglars, that fool would want to play.

* * *

I began to try to whisper another warning to my wife. Poor soul, she didn't know yet what it was all about. She gave me a withering look and flopped back on the pillow. If I could only reach the outside hall and summon the elevator man! I made the effort walking stiffly as though expecting a crack on the conck any second. Going through the hall I announced: "It's no use boys. I've turned in the burglar alarm. The police will be here any minute." And as a bright afterthought added: "If you hurry you might get away!" Still nothing happened. And by this time the Sealyham—and what a big help he had been too?—joined us with his rubber bone and all set for a frolic. It's that way around this house. Anytime I grow serious, everybody begins to skylark. It wouldn't have surprised me if the cook turned on the graphophone at 4 in the morning.

* * *

Well, anyway, there wasn't a burglar. It may have been nightmare, hallucination or plain nuttiness. But they'd better leave me alone. All day I've been in one of those austerely quiet moods. Last time I was like this I slammed a copy spike at a city editor. My wife rubs it in by talking to the dogs in the next room. Such as: "Go hunt the bold, bad burglars!" And I'm not so fussed as she thinks. I often get up and put on my trousers backward this way.
